Packers, Processors Compel Livestock Auctions To Put Anti-BSE Steps Into Place

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Because of the recent concerns about bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE), also called "mad cow disease," several processors are taking their own steps to ensure that livestock from auctions are certified safe.

According to a letter sent recently to producers from the Leesport Farmers' Market, the worldwide media attention on the BSE issue has forced many beef packers and processors, in addition to retail operations, to establish certification programs for their suppliers to ensure they are not receiving cattle that have been fed ruminant-derived protein materials.

Other livestock auctions have reported the same type of action. Jim DeGaetano of Carlisle said two packers have requested compliance from those who sell animals at the market. Jim Starliper of Four States Livestock Sales in Hagerstown, Md., Frederick Livestock Auction, and Westminster Livestock Auction, has a "stack of papers" regarding the compliance issue.

Mike McDermott, office manager at New Holland Sales Stables, has already been contacted by a couple of packers and is sure the certification program will also have to be under way at the auction.

According to Woody Weist, president of the Leesport market, in 1997, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) adopted a regulation, Title 21 Part 589.2000 of the Code of Federal Regulations. The regulations prohibit the feeding of ruminant meat and bone meal to ruminant animals.

Prohibited feed is not allowed to be fed to cattle. Producers are cautioned to buy "feed products only from companies that comply with FDA rules," according to a compliance letter.

This regulation, noted Weist in the letter, "resulted from efforts to control any possible introduction or spread of BSE or 'mad cow disease' into the domestic cattle herd of the United States."

No BSE has been reported in this country.

"Participating packers in the certification program have made it clear that they will not purchase any cattle from producers who have not signed a

'Chicken Holiday' This Fall Could Help Stop Avian Influenza

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — The USDA wants live bird markets, this fall, to "take a holiday" for about three days.

It's all in an effort to rid flocks of the deadly yet persistent avian influenza (A.I.) virus that devastated the industry in 1983 and posed another significant threat just a few years ago.

The USDA plans to compensate live bird market (LBM) operators $1.5 million to break the infectious cycle that has been found to originate in the live

Delmarva Broiler/Fryer
ATLANTA, GA.
March 15, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was limited to standing commitments in most cases. Seller offerings varied from well balanced to ample on the 2.25 and 2.5 pound sizes. Heavier weights were in excess and were competively priced in an effort to stimulate additional buying interest. Live supplies were about moderate; weights were light to heavy, mostly desirable to heavy. Processing schedules were moderate. Less than truckiot asking prices were 1 cent lower at 55 to 69 cents. Trade sentiment remained weak and unsettled. In the parts complex, all items were at least adequate for the very light and cautious buying interest.

Northeast Broiler Fryer Parts Part I

ATLANTA, GA.
March 14, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Trucklot buying activity was mostly light as purchasing activity continued to center around regular committments and dealers found that any extra product on hand was generally difficult to place. Offerings of boneless-skinless breasts were more than sufficient, and bone-in breasts remained readily available with discounting often noted. Dark meat parts were at least adequate, although, leg quarters were usually the best balanced item. Wings remained well cleared. Movement through retail and distributive channels very limited, however, spot feature activity was spurring additional interest in some areas. The market tone was no better than steady on boneless skinless breasts, barely steady on bone-in breasts, about steady on the balance.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
March 14, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Daily National Grain Market Summary

Sharp declines in soybean market due to concerns of spread of foot and mouth outbreak in Europe and now Argentina, could reduce world soybean meal and feed grain demand. Wheat bids mixed 2 cents lower to 3 cents higher. Corn 2 to 3 cents lower. Sorghum 5 cents lower. Soybean bids 12 to 13 lower.

Wheat bids mostly lower as lack of fresh export news and beneficial moisture in HRW growing areas limited gains. However, with new cases of foot and mouth problems could make US wheat more attractive. Corn lower with carryover pressure from soybean bids. Export sales showing a little activity but announcements coming from our regular customers. Soybean bids sharply lower in reaction to foot and mouth outbreak with new cases in Argentina. This outbreak have the potential to further cut world livestock numbers for feed grain demand are look to be negative factors.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

MARCH 19–25, 2001

NEW MOON, MARCH 24

SPRING FEVER?

"Fever-lurk, Neither play nor work," warns one old fable. In Old French, fever-lurden or fever-lurgan meant a fit of idleness. With the Vernal Equinox commencing on March 20, perhaps it is time for a spring tonic of cleansing greens to purge your winter-dulled system of its steady diet of winter squashes, potatoes, and cabbage. If the dandelions are not up yet, consider the early cresses, or some new spinach, sheep sorrel, or lamb's quarters. Some herbalists make teas of the roots of the burdock plant. Most of these spring tonic greens are highly diuretic but are also high in vitamins and minerals. Add a splash of vinegar for a bit more potassium, or boil them with butter and bacon bits for "comfort food."

A human being: an ingenious assembly of portable plumbing.

–Christopher Morley (American editor and author, 1890-1957)

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

A bushel of March dust is worth a king's ransom.

When cattle lie down during light rain, it will soon pass.

A dry March never brings its bread.

Okla. National Stockyards

Report Supplied By USDA

Compared to last week: Feeder steers and heifers over 700 lbs 1.00-2.00 lower with moderate demand. Stocker cattle and calves steady. Demand continues outstanding for stockers. Cattle under 700 lbs continue to constitute a large portion of the supply and many of these in thin to very thin condition. The thin condition and numbers of stocker cattle is unusual for March which typically sees mostly feeder cattle off wheat. The scarce wheat and rye pastures this season has caused this situation. Farmers that choose to harvest their wheat crop had to exit those fields this week regardless of size or condition of cattle. Quality of supply well below last week and plain to average, some attractive. Flesh condition of feeder cattle mostly medium, some fleshy. Weigh-ups average.

Special stock cow sale to be held Thursday, March 15, 2001 Slaughter cows and bulls 1.00 lower. Packer demand fairly good, however feeder cow buyers very aggressive and often pushing packers beyond their limits. Total of 330 cows and bulls sold with 45 percent to packers.

Receipts this week 11,250; last week 8395; last year 10,400

Supply consisted of 58 percent yearlings over 600 lbs; 39 percent calves and light yearlings under 600 lbs; 3 percent cows and bulls.

Heifers comprised 38 percent of feeder and calf supply.

OPINION

Remain Biosecure

Mad cow disease. Foot and mouth disease (FMD). Avian influenza (A.I.).

The list of disease "concerns" for producers in this region is astounding.

At the BBC News Website (news.bbc.co.uk), the reports are that as of March 9, "it has been the worst day yet for outbreaks of foot and mouth disease, with a raft of new cases crushing hopes of an easing in livestock restrictions."

Twenty new cases, according to the BBC, were identified that Friday, bringing the total number across the United Kingdom to 127.

Apparently, 1967 was the worst year for the crisis, with 185 cases in the same length of time.

Paula Franke, in her Frankely Speaking column on Agdomain.com (www.agdomain.com), points to the "foot in mouth fiasco," about how the disease is showing up all over the globe.

It's also called hoof and mouth disease, or Aftosa.

(Though, Franke writes, in the U.S., there hasn't been foot and mouth problem in a serious way since 1929).

CNN.com/World (at www.cnn.com) has a great Q & A site about the disease. They point out the acute infectious viral disease causes blisters, fever and lameness in animals with hooves. Pregnant animals, according to the site, often abort and dairy cattle may dry up.

Mortality is greater for young stock (at 75 percent) than adult stock (only 5 percent), according to information at www.Bayovac.com. FMD is highly contagious and one of the most feared diseases, and is endemic to Asia, Africa, parts of Europe, and South America.

The virus that causes FMD is resistant to cold temperatures and survives even freezing, but it is susceptible to pH less than 5, sunlight, heat and dryness, according to the Website.

Infected animals, according to Bayovac, develop fever, depression, nasal discharge, and anorexia. Blisters may appear on the muzzle, teats, udder, pili of the rumen, interdigital area, and coronary band, according to the Website.

FMD affects cattle, sheep, pigs, and goats, according to CNN. But CNN is quick to point out though there is no known cure, FMD is mainly an economic rather than safety issue.

Franke, in her Agdomain column, noted that, in the past week, she read reports that "visitors to the UK are required to have their shoes disinfected before being allowed to depart American airports on arrival."

One way of looking at the fiasco: Biosecurity measures are in place almost everywhere!

Can farms afford not to be without some type of animal health monitoring program with proper biosecurity at all levels of their livestock operation?

In the December 1995 issue of Agricultural Research Magazine, in July 1825, an issue of American Farmer from Baltimore noted that "bewildered farmers were finding their animals lame, the fleshy part in the division in the hoof 'sore entirely through,' and, worse still, "the disease appears to be contagious.'"

For livestock producers, foot-and-mouth disease is still a "hot story" more than 175 years later, according to the magazine.

County extension livestock agents know about how the types of problems in the UK can be avoided here.

Though there are no reports of FMD in this country, it's best to be aware of what's happening to our neighbors across the sea.

Talk to your extension agents. Don't let what happened in Great Britain happen here.

To Participate In New Farmers Markets

Farm to City is seeking farmers to participate in new farmers' markets in Philadelphia for the 2001 season. These new markets will offer farmers the opportunity to directly market their produce to consumers in the city.

The markets will open in late May or early June and will run weekly through October or early November. In most cases, the markets will be open. for four hours, one day a week.

Farmers' markets meet the large demand for locally grown produce created by the Farmers' Market Nutrition Program (FMNP). Last year the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture issued more than $1.3 million in vouchers for purchase of fresh produce to Philadelphia senior citizens and mothers with young children.

This year, for the first time, only farmers can redeem FMNP vouchers. The program is a major benefit to farmers selling in farmers' markets.

Farm To City is looking for growers, large and small, to sell at Philadelphia farmers' markets. In you are interested in this opportunity, contact Bob Pierson toll-free at (866) 745-6587 or by e-mail at phillymarkets@aol.com for more information about market locations and schedules.

Farm to City, a program of the Oley institute is supported in part by a grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

To Force Spring Flowers

Horticulture agent Tim Elkner suggests late winter is a good time to create an early spring in your home by forcing the flowers of spring blooming landscape plants.

Trees and shrubs that bloom in the spring set their flower buds in the fall. Once the flower buds have been exposed to several weeks of cold weather, they will bloom if brought indoors.

Flowering dogwood, forsythia, crabapple, redbud, pussy willow, honeysuckle, and magnolia are the easiest plants to force. Look for branches with plenty of flower buds and cut them with pruners just above a side bud. The length of the branch can vary from 6-18 inches. Recut the stems before placing them in water.

Place a branch in an upright container vase. Add hot water to cover about 3 inches of the stem, and allow to stand about one-half hour. Then fill the vase the rest of the way with cool water. Buds will take one to five weeks to open, depending on the plant and how close to its natural blooming time the branches are cut. Shrub branches are easier to force than tree branches.

For longer-lasting blooms, keep the flowers in a cool location and away from direct sunlight. Always keep the vase filled with water. Floral preservatives may extend the life of the blooms as well.

To Buy Good Quality Seed

The success of any crop is dependant on many variables, many of which are out of the control of the farmer.

Agronomy agent Bob Anderson points out that seed is one variable that should be controlled. Always buy quality seeds, which are tested for germination, and weed seed content. The germination test should have been conducted no more than nine months before the seed is planted.

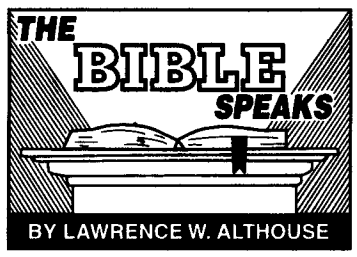
Seeds should have a high germination percentage. When the percentage is low, more seed is required.

Always buy improved varieties with top yield potential and resistance to common diseases. Choosing the best variety is one of the most important decisions a grower makes when planting a crop.

Quote of the Week:

"Nearly all men can stand adversity, but if you want to test a man's character, give him power."

— Abraham Lincoln



'RECOGNIZED?'

Background Scripture:
Acts 3:1 through 4:13.
Devotional Reading:
1 Corinthians 1:26-31.

The man who was "lame from birth" and encountered Peter and John at the Beautiful Gate of the temple had a classic experience with the gospel of Jesus Christ — he got a lot more than he asked for, just as do most, if not all, of us.

Lame from birth, he was carried daily to the Beautiful Gate of the temple, where he begged for alms from those who came there to worship.

We have no reason to believe that he knew who Peter and John were, or that they were apostles of the recently-crucified Jesus of Nazareth, who was believed to be a healer. No, this man wanted from Peter and John what he asked of all who came there — some coins to help him put food on the table and a roof over his head.

What happened that day, however, was something much more than he expected.

One reason, I believe, is that, instead of pushing by him as though he were not there, they gave him their attention. They could have given him a coin without even looking at him, but "Peter directed his gaze at him, with John . . ." (3:4). They really looked at him and they really saw him.

There are lots of people in need to whom we do not minister simply because we do not really look at them. We have learned to look in their direction without actually giving them our attention. Often, we do this because to really look at and see these people would mean that we would have to do something about it.

Fixing Your Gaze

Another reason that something special could happen that day is that they not only gave this man their attention, but they were successful in getting him to look at them with expectancy. Looking intently at the man born lame, Peter said: ""Look at us.' And he fixed his attention upon them, expecting to receive something from them" (3:4,5).

Expectancy — in prayer, in worship, and in need — is usually a prerequisite, I have found. Go to a worship service without expectancy and you are likely to experience nothing. Pray without expectancy and it will seem your prayers are unanswered. (Except sometimes: as in the case of Abraham and Zechariah, when angels informed them that they were about to become fathers in their old age.) In my experience, our problems with prayer are usually not that we expect too much, but too little. Stranghely, prayer is often a matter of both humility and audacity.

Peter then says: "I have no silver and gold, but I give you what I have; in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, walk." In a moment the lame man was lame no longer, standing, walking and even leaping in joy. He asked for alms; he got his legs instead, a healing that would change his life forever. Unlike some who were healed in the name of Jesus Christ, this man did not take his healing and run. "While he clung to Peter and John, all the people ran together to them in the portico called Solomon's astounded" (3:11).

The Power To Heal

It occurs to me that Peter and John passed an important test that day. Some would have been tempted to claim responsibility for this miraculous event. After all, a little adulation might help their cause. But Peter replied with requisite humility: "Men of Israel, why do you wonder at this, . . . as though by our own power or piety we had made him walk?"

The power to heal this man, Peter made clear, was that of the very Jesus whom they had crucified. And when he and John were arrested the next day and brought before the high priest, Peter and John reiterated: " . . . be it known to you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom you crucified, whom God raised from the dead, by him this man is standing before you well" (3:10,11)

Unwittingly, the high priest had presented Peter and John with an excellent opportunity to witness to Jesus Christ. When the religious authorities "saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were uneducated, common men, they wondered; and they recognized that they had been with Jesus" (4:13).

Is that not the key to being a disciple of Jesus Christ? Not what we say or how we say it, not even what we do or how we do it, but that in the lives we live people may be able to recognize that we have been with Jesus. There is no standard of discipleship higher than that.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Penn State
March 9, 2001

Dairy Futures Look Promising

- Class III peaks at $12.59 in September.
- Class IV peaks at $13.90 in September.
- Cheese market unsettled.
- 2000 consumption numbers in.

Despite a rocky week for cheese prices, the futures markets continue to remain strong for Class III and IV milk. Block cheese prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange fluctuated between $1.26-$1.32 per pound this week with barrels at $1.26-$1.2825 per pound. The grade AA butter prices remained steady this week at $1.5050 per pound at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Class III futures contracts on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange were $11.35 per CWT for March (as of March 9), peaking at $12.59 in September. The Class IV contract price on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange was $13.36 for March (as of March 9) peaking at $13.90 in September. These are very good prices, indicating strong farm-level milk prices through the spring.

The cheese market was still strong this week, but appears to be a bit shaky.

Let's review the numbers that we have so far.

USDA reported today that milk production grew 2.7 percent in 2000 from the year before on a daily average basis. Ending commercial stocks of all dairy products (on a butterfat basis) grew 11.9 percent. Consumption of dairy products was up just 2.3 percent. Much of the growth in ending stocks was because of cheese.

On the consumption side, total American cheese grew 1 percent and other cheese grew 5.1 percent, both on a daily average basis. Ending stocks of all cheese as of December 31, 2000 was up 13.9 percent from a year ago. That's a lot of growth in cheese stocks.

What has affected the market, however, is the reduction in the milk supply and cheese produc-

State Farm Leader Highlights Congressional Priorities

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The leader of a statewide farm organization outlined specific action for Congress to take this year to help Pennsylvania farmers.

About 200 farmers serving on county Farm Bureau national legislative committees are in Washington, D.C. March 14-15 to meet with their elected representatives on priority issues affecting agriculture. PFB is a voluntary farm organization representing 28,000 farm and rural families in 54 county Farm Bureaus. It is affiliated with the nation's largest general farm organization, the five-million member American Farm Bureau Federation.

Farm Bureau is urging Congress to eliminate estate taxes, establish risk management savings accounts for farmers, curb regulatory expansion, increase funding for agriculture, and to re-authorize and expand the Northeast Dairy Compact.

Noting that President Bush has made elimination of estate taxes part of his tax cut plan, Donaldson warned that "death tax" elimination "will slip from our grasp without strong bipartisan support." Statements from some wealthy taxpayers urging Congress to continue the tax, Donaldson said are "coming from the very folks who can afford to build trusts and tax shelters to protect their family's wealth, while farmers are asked to spend their limited resources to plan for death with an evolving business, that they can never be certain will be properly financed."

Donaldson urged congressmen to support legislation introduced in the House and future legislation in the Senate to eliminate estate taxes and preserve the stepped-up basis for calculating capital gains on inherited property. "The loss of stepped-up basis would continue to send family farms to the auction block, just as estate taxes have done," he said.

Donaldson also called on lawmakers to approve legislation creating the so-called Farm And Ranch Risk Management (FARRM) accounts for farmers. With these accounts, active farmers could place 20 percent of their net income for the year in a tax-deferred account for up to five years. "FARRM Account legislation would help smooth out the roller coaster ride market and weather conditions bring to our bottom lines," Donaldson told lawmakers.

Another issue causing problems for agriculture is government regulatory expansion. "In the past year, the Environmental Protection Agency has proposed expanding environmental regulations that impact farming operations," Donaldson said. EPA is prepared to expand its authority under the Clean Water Act to include non-point source water pollution under its Total Maximum Daily Load (TMDL) program. Congress has delayed this expansion until October while cost and impact studies are being done. EPA has also proposed expanding regulations of animal feeding operations by changing the definition of what constitutes a Concentrated Animal Feeding Operation (CAFO). "Expansion of these regulations bring needless expense to our operations that are not merited by a science-based approach, or the lack of existing regulation," Donaldson said. Farm Bureau supports more local-based initiatives and voluntary programs which offer financial incentives for farmers to help achieve water quality goals.

USDA's top economist has predicted 2001 will bring farmers a fourth consecutive year of record low commodity prices. As a result, agriculture will be facing disastrous consequences without additional public spending, Donaldson said. Farm Bureau is requesting an increase of $12 billion in the federal funding baseline for agriculture. The funds would be used for counter-cyclical income support programs to help farmers suffering from poor markets and weather. PFB is also requesting that counter-cyclical assistance, which fluctuates as farm prices rise or fall, be extended to livestock and crops not usually covered by federal farm programs. "Pennsylvania enjoys a great diversification in production agriculture," Donaldson pointed out. "Much of this diversity has had its needs ignored in past Farm Bill discussions."

The final issue discussed by Donaldson was expansion of the Northeast Dairy Compact which has operated in six New England states since 1997. Compact provisions are set to expire Sept. 30 unless re-authorized by Congress. PFB wants the Dairy Compact expanded so Pennsylvania, which adopted enabling legislation in 1999, can join along with other states.

The Dairy Compact provides stability in prices for producers, processors and consumers by putting a floor on the price of milk used for fluid products. The Dairy Compact is self-financed and requires no tax support. Had Pennsylvania dairymen been included in the Dairy Compact last year, they would have received an additional $122 million in income, Donaldson said. He called on legislators to support legislation in the House and Senate to extend and expand Dairy Compact provisions.

Highland Cattle Association To Hold Spring Show And Sale

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Mid-Atlantic Cattle Association (MAHA) will be holding its annual spring show and sale at the Farm Show complex in Harrisburg on May 6.

The junior show will begin at 8 a.m. The open show begins at 9:30 a.m. There will be a heifer sale held at 4 p.m. Also at that time, the Northeast Highland Cattle Association/MAHA bull test sale will take place.

This will be one of the largest sales of Highland bulls ever in Pennsylvania, and all of the animals have been performance tested. The show and sale will be held in the small arena at the Farm Show complex.

In addition to the show and sales, meetings of the Mid-Atlantic Northeast, and American Highland Cattle Associations will be held. This unique convergence of three major Highland Cattle organizations stands to attract one of the largest gatherings of Highland cattle and enthusiasts in the U.S.

The show and sale are free — all are welcome.

For more information, contact MAHA Director Rich Wurzbach at (717) 927-9721.

Weather Protect Weed Control for Top Yields

FIELD NOTES

Weather is one of the most important factors affecting weed control in corn today. Dry, wet or cold weather can lead to erratic weed control, especially with soil-applied herbicides.

Herbert Roos and Jim Campbell have taken steps to weather-protect their weed control by switching from inconsistent preemergence programs to using a planned post program with DuPont™ Basis Gold® herbicide. They have seen their decision pay off in more reliable control of both grasses and broadleaves—as well as award-winning yields in the 2000 National Corn Yield Contest.

Unlike soil-applied herbicides, Basis Gold® doesn't need rain to deliver burndown control of emerged grasses and broadleaves. With a passing shower, the residual activity kicks in to control foxtails, waterhemp, giant ragweed, pigweeds, velvetleaf and lambsquarters, and helps keep fields clean through harvest. When growers look at costs, Basis Gold® is up to $3 per acre less than the leading competitive program.

"We have had real good luck with Basis Gold®," says Roos, a first-place yield winner in Illinois

"It seems like the preplant treatments will play out, and then the waterhemp and foxtail come in late. We haven't seen Basis Gold® run out, even in years with heavy rainfall."

Sandbur, lambsquarters and cocklebur are among the major weed problems for Campbell, who farms near Canton, Mo. Basis Gold® has proven itself effective and crop safe—something that Campbell notes is not always the case with a preemergence program

"I've had times with a pre-only program where we went two to three weeks without rain and it never activated. By the time we got rain, the weeds were too big to control," says Campbell, a third-place yield winner in Missouri "Basis Gold® doesn't affect the corn one bit We can spray corn four to ten inches tall, and it just keeps on growing It just does a fantastic job."

NASS
Agriculture Counts

By Marc Tosiano
Pa. State Statistician

Agricultural Statistics Service is a private company. The Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service is a joint office of USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA). This arrangement exists in all 50 states to eliminate duplication between federal and state government in the development of agricultural statistics. We also partner with Penn State to conduct special studies of Pennsylvania agriculture.

The cooperative agreement between NASS and PDA provides for meaningful, accurate, and objective statistics for all sectors of agriculture, including crop, livestock and poultry production, economic measures, pest management, and demographics. These statistics are the result of the Census of Agriculture conducted every five years and periodic surveys for major commodities between censuses.

Surveys are usually federally funded through USDA. However, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and the Milk Marketing Board also sponsor studies not covered by the federal program such as the Custom Machinery Rates Survey and Monthly Cost of Milk Production, respectively.

Agricultural statistics are available at no charge on the Internet at (for the Pennsylvania home page, click on "State Information"). The Pennsylvania Internet site offers free email subscriptions to all national and/or state reports. (Yes, paper copies are still available but they are not as timely!)

Farm Bill Opinion Survey: Penn State has asked us at the Pennsylvania Ag Statistics Service to assist them in conducting a study to gather input from agricultural operators for the upcoming Farm Bill. The "2001 National Agricultural, Food and Public Policy Preference Survey" will be mailed to about 2,800 growers across Pennsylvania this spring. The results of this effort will provide Congress with input from growers across the commonwealth. This study has historically been conducted in midwestern states for the last few Farm Bills.

Penn State and other land grant universities in the Northeast want to offer Congress another perspective as they prepare for the new Farm Bill. The previous Farm Bill expires in 2002. Before the authorization expires, congressional action will be necessary to plot the future of federal farm programs and develop a new Farm Bill, otherwise programs will revert to the language of permanent legislation passed more than 50 years ago.

Weekly Crop Weather Report: At this time every year we prepare for the weekly crop progress survey known as the "Crop & Weather Inquiry." Each week from April to November, extension agents, farmers, and other agricultural specialists give their expert opinion about field conditions and crop progress in their county. Information from these reporters gives a very timely status of crop conditions across Pennsylvania, including field crops, fruits, vegetables, pasture, and soil moisture conditions.

They also give their estimate of percent of various crops planted or harvested and their stage of development.

We are actively seeking reporters that are knowledgeable about growing conditions around their county. Typically, reporters take about 10 minutes to complete the survey form each week. If you are interested in becoming a weekly reporter, please send an e-mail to or call (800) 498-1518 and ask for Eric Stout or Stephanie Houston. We prefer that reporters use the Internet but responses can also be faxed to the office using our toll-free fax number.

After gathering this data, we publish the Pennsylvania Weekly Crop and Weather Roundup on the Internet after 4 p.m. on the first business day of each week. The other 49 states are doing this at the same time to provide the most timely status of current growing conditions across the nation. In 1999, this report was the first indication of the size and location of the developing drought across the Northeast. For more information, see www.usda.gov/nass/pubs/staterpt.htm.

In addition to field conditions, the weekly report also contains weather information from selected stations across Pennsylvania as reported to us by the National Weather Service in State College. It includes information about temperature, precipitation, and growing degree days.

On a Personal Note: Being new to the area, some of you might ask about my background in the field of agricultural statistics. I received my bachelor's degree in plant science from Rutgers' College of Agriculture and Environmental Science and an applied master's degree in survey research from the University of Michigan.

I have worked for USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) for 23 years. My experiences include 10 years in the NASS headquarters unit in Washington D.C. and 13 years in the field offices in Ohio, New Jersey, and New England. In June 2000, I transferred from Concord, N.H. to Harrisburg as the new state statistician after the retirement of Wally Evans.

Sustainability Training Grants Awarded

BURLINGTON, Vt. — The Northeast Region Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education program (SARE) recently awarded $533,046 in grants to train cooperative extension and other agricultural professionals who work with farmers in the methods and concepts of sustainable agriculture.

This year, funded projects include training in holistic management and whole-farm planning, organic agriculture, and organizing and energizing inner-city neighborhoods with urban gardening projects.

Northeast SARE has funded 64 training projects since the professional development program was begun in 1994. The overall goal of the SARE Professional Development Program is to give extension, USDA-NRCS, and other agricultural personnel the training they need to serve growers and advance sustainable practices in the northeast region.

SARE is a USDA competitive grants program offering support to educators, researchers, and farmers. The Northeast SARE region includes Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Massachusetts, Maryland, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, West Virginia, Vermont, and Washington, D.C.

For information about grant opportunities, call (802) 656-0471 or go to www.uvm.edu/nesare/.

It's like the rain's included.
Most corn herbicides need rain to work. But Basis Gold® herbicide works with or without rain. Because it has contact control that starts killing grass and broadleaf weeds immediately. And residual control that kicks in when it rains. So whether it rains or shines, it's always a bad day for weeds. For more Information, see your local DuPont Ag Retailer.

Pennsylvania Machinery Custom Rates 2001

By Eric D. Stout
Agricultural Statistician

The custom rates shown are averages from voluntary reports by custom operators and farmers throughout Pennsylvania. Most of the rates are stated per acre, cwt., ton, bale, or bushel rather than per hour to reduce the variation due to machinery size. Individual rates vary due to differences in working conditions, services performed, or even the operator's eagerness to do custom work. Therefore, the average rates shown should not be considered absolute indications of fair charges.

Acreage rates are shown separately for two regions of the state, labeled "Mountain" and "Valley". The differences in rates between regions reflect differences in terrain, soils and alternative opportunities for the labor and equipment used. Figures labeled "State" represent the straight average of all reports used regardless of geographic location.

Of the 72 rates reported with year-to-year comparisons, 56 increased, 5 decreased, and 11 are the same as last year. The overall average is up 2 percent from the previous year. This percentage increase was computed by adding the rates for all jobs, regardless of basis of charge, and dividing by last year's comparable total.

DETERMINE RISK
John Berry
Lehigh County
Ag Marketing
Educator

Understanding exposure to risk is fundamental to farm business success. This implies an understanding of risk sources, tradeoffs, and management strategies.

Management decisions and outcome success are dependent upon correct action selection. Understanding risk exposure will allow managers to meet their risk management goals by taking correct action.

The two basic questions every farm business manager must answer to effectively manage risk are 1) What is the risk bearing capacity of my farm? and 2) What is my willingness to assume risk?

The answers to these questions, and the process followed to answer them, will determine the correct risk exposure.

Risk-Bearing Capacity

The capacity to bear risk primarily depends upon whether or not the farm operation can withstand financial losses without being forced into solvency or liquidation. Financial risks are largely determined by production and market risks. If farm production declines, and/or if prices drop, profit decreases and losses occur. These losses must be covered or absorbed out of equity capital or net worth.

Financial losses are also influenced by the capital structure of the farm, — that is the mix of debt and equity. High debt farms, or those with a high proportion of debt relative to equity or total assets, are especially vulnerable because losses can be magnified and financial risks increased. Consequently, the debt-to-asset ratio is one important measure of determining the risk capacity of any farm operation.

Another important measure of risk-bearing capacity is loan repayment capacity. Lenders want to be repaid in cash and have little interest in repossessing the collateral securing a loan. Ability to repay is the final determination of any credit decision. A cash flow analysis can indicate the ability of the farm to repay by showing the timing of cash flows through the farm business.

Two repayment capacity measures recommended by the Farm Financial Standards Task Force are 1) the Term Debt and Capital Lease Coverage Ratio and 2) the Capital Replacement and Term Debt Repayment Margin.

Willingness To Assume Risk

The willingness to assume risk primarily depends upon individual attitudes, objectives, and financial resources. Given both the individual's objectives and financial situation, a farmer's attitude about risk may vary depending on the probabilities and size of the potential gains and losses. However, some farmers are willing to assume the probability of large financial loss with little apparent stress, while others with the same financial resource experience high stress and sleepless nights.

These differences are due to personal preferences and individual objectives. Generally, farmers have a greater willingness to accept risk than their farm has ability to bear risk.

Measures of individual willingness to assume risk are more subjective than measures of farm risk-bearing capacity. One measure of willingness to assume risk is the certainty equivalent (CE). CE is defined as the amount of money for certain that makes the farmer indifferent between a guaranteed amount for certain and the expected risky amount from accepting the risk. Farmers with high CE are less willing to accept risk than farmers with low CE for the same risk.

Another method of determining willingness to accept risk is to compare the CE with the expected monetary value (EMV) from accepting the risk. The expected monetary value is the probability-weighted sum of the possible monetary outcomes. The EMV minus the CE is called the risk premium. Obtaining data on the certainty equivalent and calculating the risk premium is a relatively simple method of determining a farmer's risk attitude considering the probabilities and sizes of gains and losses.

Because risk attitudes change over time, and with different financial positions, alternative probabilities and sizes of losses and gains, it is difficult to predict how individual farmers will respond over time. However, understanding the variables that cause risk attitudes to change are beneficial in helping design management strategies. Insurance agents who understand risk concepts are in a better position to identify which insurance products best meet any particular farmer's risk management needs.

Desired Risk Exposure

There is a tradeoff between risk and return. If producers knew future yields and input and commodity prices with certainty, rents and returns would be bid up or down until costs equaled returns. All of the factors of production (land, labor, capital and management) would earn a competitive return. However, in this world of certainty, there would be no losses or profits.

In the real world of making risky decisions, individual farmers must base production decisions on expectations rather than certainty. The factors of production are bid up or down until costs equal "expected" returns. Actual outcomes that are higher than expected are called profits and outcomes lower than expectations are losses. The desired level of risk exposure, or optimal choice, for the farm producer is to balance potential for profit against the risk of loss. Generally, the risk of loss is greater than the potential for profit.

Farm producers operate in a world of tremendous and increasing uncertainty. Information and tools that reduce this uncertainty are essential to survival. Management consultants, accountants, crop insurance agents, lenders, and extension agents are in an opportunistic position because they can sit down one-on-one with producers and help them answer the important questions posed above. For any of these professionals to be effective, it is important to be knowledgeable regarding risk concepts.

Farmers Union Commends USDA On EU Meat Ban

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Farmers Union (NFU) recently praised the USDA for its temporary prohibition of the importation of animals and animal products from the European Union (EU) into the U.S.

The ban is in reaction to the discovery of foot and mouth disease in several European countries.

Additionally, Farmers Union urges the department to review other products, including Milk Protein Concentrate (MPC), in the current ban and to increase monitoring of other countries for the presence of the devastating livestock disease.

"We commend USDA for this decisive action that will help protect the health of U.S. livestock and maintain the utmost confidence Americans have in the food they provide to their families," said Leland Swenson, president of NFU. "With the discovery of foot and mouth in Europe and the continuing crisis with "mad cow disease,' it is imperative that we protect consumers and farmers' herds from the devastating effects of these public health and agricultural emergencies."

The temporary ban announced recently applies to animals and animal products from the European Union. It prohibits travelers from carrying any agricultural products into the U.S. USDA will also send experts to study the European crisis, heighten security at ports of entry, and embark on a public education campaign.

In addition to its support for this recent action by USDA, Farmers Union is calling for agricultural and trade authorities to monitor other countries where practices in raising livestock put them at risk for foot and mouth and bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE), also known as "mad cow disease." In the light of this current crisis, the family farmer and rancher organization urges early passage of the Consumer Right to Know Act, sponsored by Sens. Tim Johnson, D-S.D., and Michael Enzi, R-Wy. This legislation would require a country-of-origin label on all meat, fruits, and vegetables sold at the retail level in the U.S. and require meat be from animals born and raised in the U.S. before receiving a label denoting it as a product of the United States.

NFU also supports Sen. Tom Daschle's D-S.D., call for a moratorium on all animal and animal product imports until the U.S. can assure proper regulation and oversight concerning the spread of disease.

NCBA Response To USDA's Ban On Animal Imports From Europe

The USDA has taken action to temporarily prohibit U.S. imports of animals and animal products from the European Union. The action was taken following confirmation of foot-and-mouth disease in France.

This action does not affect the beef industry because the U.S. has not imported any beef from the United Kingdom (UK) since 1985. Import of ruminant animals and ruminant products from the UK and other countries with BSE was banned in 1989 and import of live ruminant animals and animal products from all European countries was banned in 1997.

The USDA had previously banned import of hogs and pork products from the UK following the foot-and-mouth disease outbreak there. In 2000, the U.S. imported $216 million (64.4 thousand metric tons) of pork from the EU. This represented about a third of all U.S. pork imports and most of these imports were from Denmark.

Foot-and-mouth disease is not a human health threat, but is a significant threat to the economic health of the cattle, hog and sheep industry in any country where it appears. Consumers can be assured that U.S. beef is safe and that actions, like USDA's prohibition, will aid in keeping it protected.

NPPC Supports USDA Action To Prevent Spread Of Foot And Mouth Disease

"The National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) supports USDA's temporary ban on imports of livestock, meat and meat products from the European Union (EU)," said NPPC President Barbara Determan, pork producer from Early, Iowa.

"An import ban on EU meat exports is an unfortunate but prudent step given the evidence that foot and mouth disease has been confirmed on the European continent.

"U.S. pork producers deeply sympathize with their European counterparts and hope that this financially devastating, and highly contagious livestock disease can be contained quickly.

"The U.S. has been free of Foot and Mouth Disease (FMD) since 1929. NPPC is working closely with USDA, veterinarians and pork producers to ensure that all measures are taken to prevent the chance of this disease again affecting U.S. livestock herds."

USDA Announces Third Program For Dairy Farmers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA recently announced that eligible dairy farmers can receive new or additional payments under the third Dairy Market Loss Assistance Program.

Sign-up for this new "DMLA III" is limited to farmers with new dairy operations or to farmers whose operations received payments under DMLA II for less than 12 months milk production.

Generally, DMLA II program payment levels established the production levels for payments for operations under the DMLA III program. This additional sign-up, which began Feb. 26, will allow dairy operations that did not have a full 12 months of DMLA II production to receive an additional payment under DMLA III.

Payment rates under this new sign-up will be $.6468 per hundredweight (CWT) Total payment eligibility under DMLA II could not exceed 26,000 CWT of milk, but under DMLA III, payments can now be made for production up to 39,000 CWT.

For those operations participating in the new sign-up that have already received DMLA III payments, additional payments can be made only to the extent that there is remaining eligibility for those dairy operations under the 39,000 CWT production limitation.

Eligibility questions can be made at local USDA Service Centers or Farm Service Agency county offices.

DMLA III is authorized by Section 805 of the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2001.

NEW!!! SOFT LEAF FESCUE

Barolex Fescue Is So Fine Leafed It Looks Almost Like Ryegrass

BAROLEX TALL FESCUE

From Barenbrug is a new endophyte free variety with the softest finest leaves of any tall fescue we have seen. Barolex also offers fast establishment, late maturity and makes a good dense sod which withstands traffic.

BARTURA MEADOW FESCUE

Is much more palatable than tall fescues. In fact, it looks and tastes like a ryegrass. Dairy cows eat Bartura very well. It may be able to tolerate hot dry conditions a little bit better than perennial ryegrass, but will not be as persistant.

USDA Announces Additional Measures To Guard Against Foot-And-Mouth Disease

WASHINGTON, D.C. — On Tuesday, USDA announced it is temporarily prohibiting the importation of swine and ruminant, and any fresh swine or ruminant meat (chilled or frozen) and other products of swine and ruminants from the European Union. This does not include cooked pork products.

This temporary action is being taken following confirmation of FMD in France. On February 21, USDA announced similar actions regarding the United Kingdom and Northern Ireland. These measures are part of a coordinated prevention program to ensure the disease does not spread into the U.S.

In recent weeks, USDA has stepped up measures to guard against foot-and-mouth disease. These actions include:

- Temporarily prohibiting the importation of swine and ruminant, and any fresh swine or ruminant meat (chilled or frozen) and other products of swine and ruminants from the European Union. These restrictions augment those already in place on ruminants and ruminant products to prevent the introduction of BSE into the U.S.
- Prohibiting travelers from carrying into the U.S. any agricultural products, particularly animal products, that could spread the disease. Passengers are required to identify any farm contact to Customs and USDA officials. All baggage is subject to inspection. Violations could result in penalties of up to $1,000.
- Sending a team of experts (40 federal, state, and university officials) to the European Union to monitor, evaluate, and assist in containment efforts.
- Heightened alert at ports of entry and airports to ensure passengers, luggage, and cargo are checked as appropriate. This includes placing additional inspectors and dog teams at airports to check incoming flights and passengers.
- Heightened alert and coordination with state agriculture officials and other USDA officials stationed around the globe to monitor the situation.
- Public education campaign that includes additional signage in airports, public service announcements, information hotline, Websites, and other tools to inform the public about this important issue and steps they can take to prevent it from entering the U.S.

FMD is a highly contagious and economically devastating disease of ruminants and swine. The United States has been free of FMD since 1929. FMD is one of the animal diseases that livestock owners dread most because it spreads widely and rapidly and because it has grave economic consequences. Humans are not susceptible to the disease.

Current information on foot-and-mouth disease and traveler questions and answers are available on the Internet at http://www.usda.gov/

NPPC Declines To Support Ban On Packer Hog Ownership

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Despite hearing from a producer who said such a vote would be "a slap in the face" to producers back home, members of the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) recently declined to support a ban on packer ownership of hogs.

NPPC has been frequently criticized for tailoring its policies to support packers. A similar motion was voted down at last year's Pork Forum.

Iowa producer John Korslund made the slap in the face comment. He also said, "We can't vote this down two years in a row. Think long and hard about producer relations," he told this year's forum in Orlando.

An amendment to the motion banning packer ownership said NPPC would support "federal legislation that would limit an individual packer's ownership of hogs not to exceed 5 percent of the annual U.S. hog slaughter," about 5 million hogs. That amendment passed by a large margin.

However, before the entire resolution came to the floor, delegates outside the meeting hall met with representatives from North Carolina and Oklahoma, who opposed the move.

A new motion was substituted that says NPPC "recognizes an individual's right in a capitalistic society to pursue their economic benefit,and clarifies NPPC's position to be neutral on packer ownership of hogs."

NPPC's new president, Barb Determan, said she considered this final motion "a good compromise."

USDA Says 'Sic 'Em' To Activate FMD Detectives

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — You might call them doggy detectives. USDA calls them "The Beagle Brigade," and these long-time employees are being deployed to keep the U.S. free of foot and mouth disease (FMD).

These four-footed detectives are sniffing shoes and luggage, and have long been used to help detect prohibited fruit and meat from being brought into the U.S. by citizens returning from overseas. Recently, the beagles, who wear a distinctive green jacket, are joining about 1,800 animal health inspectors.

They're all on "heightened alert" at all major U.S. airports.

"We have our detector dog teams out there... sniffing the bags, and looking for animal products and other indicators of risk," said Richard Dunkle, with USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service. He said passengers will be fined up to $1,000 if they smuggle illegal food products into the country. "We are definitely enforcing this," Dunkle said.

Improving Grazing Systems Conference Focus

CAROLYN MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

TROY (Bradford Co.) — While snow flurries floated to the ground, graziers from Bradford and Tioga counties focused on pastures filled with green grass as they attended the 2001 Bradford and Tioga Grazing conference Friday, March 2.

Guest speakers Gregory Coumo, Ben Bartlett, and Robert DeClue addressed the 88 farmers and industry representatives at the meeting which was sponsored by several agencies and industries related to grazing.

Keynote speaker Ben Bartlett, dairy and livestock agent for Michigan State University, asked farmers if they were serious about grazing. He then outlined five steps that he has implemented to help him pasture animals more effectively.

The first step is identifying current and potential yields. He suggests using pounds of dry matter per acre as the standard measure and then talking about percent of the total yield that was harvested as pasture.

The next step is controlling the harvest.

"Controlled grazing is really your ability to balance the needs of the plant and the needs of your animals to meet your production expectations," he said.

The third factor is manipulating soil fertility. Bartlett explained that in Europe, fertilizing pastures with nitrogen is common.

"If your phosphorus and potassium are up to recommendations, you may want to consider adding nitrogen for strategic grass growth," he explained.

Step four is to manipulate pasture plant species.

"The plant community that is growing in your pastures is partly due to what you planted, and to a large degree due to your harvest management," said Bartlett.

He illustrated this point by noting that "keeping grass grazed short in the spring will promote tiller formation yielding a dense sod and increased clover growth."

The fifth step is to plow and plant new varieties.

"This is an expensive and high risk venture, but if you know your current yields, have good harvest management skills, and a good fertility program, and know what's growing in your pastures now, then new varieties may be your window of opportunity."

Later Bartlett shifted his focus from grass growth to pasture watering and shade requirements.

"A cow chooses shade, but is it life threatening if she's not in the shade? No!" said Bartlett, as he noted that cows in a pasture without shade are more likely to continue grazing than cows with a shaded area of pasture.

Water access, however, is a necessary part of pasture management as he noted several studies on water intake.

"We need to think of water as a resource and as a nutrient. Limiting water intake limits feed intake which limits animal performance," said Bartlett.

He also noted that water needs to be ample and convenient as well as clean and safe.

"Water is a grazing tool," said Bartlett, as he cited studies that have shown that 900 feet is a key distance when positioning waterers.

"If the water is more than 900 feet away, the cows will come to the waterer as a herd. If it's less than 900 feet away, cows will come individually," said Bartlett.

When developing watering systems, Bartlett cautions to always have backup plans in place to make sure that enough water is reaching the cows.

Robert J. DeClue, Natural Resource Conservation Service (NRCS) land management specialist, echoed Bartlett's advice on making sure the water supply is adequate. "If you don't provide enough water, performance will suffer," he said.

DeClue reported results of a study on water intake on a New York dairy farm where actual water intake was measured.

The average water intake from the pasture trough was 5.2 gallons per cow per day over the entire 1999 grazing season, and 6 gallons of water per cow per day during the 2000 season, for lactating cows.

Gregory Coumo, director of the Minnesota Research Station, spoke to the group about pasture establishment and renovation and extending the grazing season.

"Pasture renovation is a way to increase forage production by growing more productive species," said Coumo.

He noted that pastures that are made up primarily of short grasses, such as bluegrass, can be improved by including more productive grasses such as bromegrass, orchardgrass, and reed canarygrass. Grass pastures, he said, can be improved by adding legumes such as alfalfa or clovers.

Seeding practices range from conventional tillage to no-till seeding to frost seeding, spreading the seed around the pasture, and allowing the freeze thaw cycle to work it into the soil.

Coumo also spoke on extending the grazing season by stockpiling forages.

"Grazing in the fall can offer an excellent alternative to more expensive hay or silage feeding programs," he said.

The grazing season can be extended through planting grazable corn or field turnips. It can also be lengthened by stockpiling forage or removing the animals from the pasture to allow forage to accumulate for later grazing.

"The key to having fall forage is figuring out what you want to do in the summer," said Coumo.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — In conjunction with the Keystone Haflinger Sale, results of the 20001 Pennsylvania Draft Horse Sale in February were announced recently.

The committee reported a record sale. Averages were up in every category, including the Haflinger, up about $300.

The draft horse sale has a 22-year history. The Haflinger sale began last year.

Dale K. Stoltzfus, secretary, reports that averages were up in every category. Belgian mares captured a sale average of $1,992, up $106; Belgian stallions, $1,019, up $57; all geldings, $1,833, up $427.

Gains came in the Percheron division, with mares averaging $2,017, up $897; stallions averaged $1,415, up $632.

Ag Secretary Marks 4-H Week

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes recently marked Pennsylvania 4-H Week, which continues through Saturday, March 17.

"Gov. Tom Ridge and I salute all of the young people, leaders, extension agents, and friends that make 4-H what it is today," Hayes said. "Their dedication to the youth of this great commonwealth, and the development of leadership, citizenship, and service, is very important to the competition of Pennsylvania in the 21st century."

An avid supporter of 4-H and youth, Hayes noted that 4-H programs are open to young people between the ages of 8-18.

"For more than 80 years, 4-H has strived to make the best better," Hayes said. "Statewide, young men and women are participating in a wide range of 4-H projects — from gardening, livestock and family living, to public speaking, leadership, and service projects."

More than 166,500 rural and urban youth participate in the 4-H clubs throughout Pennsylvania. More than 11,800 volunteer leaders assist 4-H members with their projects.

Administered through the Penn State Cooperative Extension, 4-H seeks to help young people become self-directed, productive, and contributing members of society.

USDA Announces Programs For Apple Growers, Wool And Mohair

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA recently announced that sign-up for the Apple Market Loss Assistance (AMLA) and Wool and Mohair Loss Assistance (WMLA) programs have begun.

USDA also announced details on how to receive grazing payments in lieu of loan deficiency payments for the 2001 crop year.

Apples: Under the AMLA, about $100 million will be used to provide assistance to eligible growers for their 1998 and 1999 apple production. The payments will help offset economic losses because of low prices in the U.S. apple market. Growers can receive a payment per pound for the higher of either 1998 or 1999 apple production, and they will be paid on a maximum of 1.6 million pounds per separate apple operation.

To receive cash payments, eligible apple producers must: (1) have produced and harvested apples during the 1998 and/or 1999 crop year; (2) not have received compensation from any other federal program, other than crop insurance, for the same market loss; and (3) apply for cash payments during the application period for each apple operation. The deadline for application under the AMLA program will be announced later.

Wool and Mohair: USDA also will pay eligible wool and mohair procedures who suffered economic loss because of prices about $20 million for the 2000 marketing year. The payment rate will not exceed 40 cents per pound.

Producers wanting to participate in the wool and mohair program must file an application for payment by April 13, 2001. Eligible wool or mohair must have been shorn in the U.S. and livestock must have been owned for 30 days or more prior to shearing. The wool or mohair must have been produced during the 2000 marketing year.

Grazing: USDA can now begin payments to eligible producers who elect to use acreage planted to wheat, barley, or oats to graze livestock and give up any other harvesting. The payment will be determined using the loan deficiency payment rate in effect as of the date the agreement.

For more details on these and other USDA programs, contact a USDA Service Center or Farm Service Agency county office. Office locations are in the government section of the telephone directory.

Hunter, Non-Hunters Urged To Respond To Deer Hunt Proposal

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Game Commission seeks public comment on its proposed changes to the state's deer hunting regulations.

Because all citizens — whether they hunt deer or not — may be affected by these changes, a wildlife expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences urges everyone to respond.

"The goal of the proposed changes is to decrease the doe population while increasing the percentage of mature bucks," said Gary San Julian, professor of wildlife resources. "The commission will finalize the changes at their April 8 meeting."

The state's deer population is as high as its ever been, San Julian said. "Each year, more than 40,000 deer carcasses are picked up off the highways. Probably that many more get hit and die in the woods and fields. Deer-car interactions cost lives and do tens of millions of dollars in damage.

"Deer also are responsible for about $75 million in damage to grain crops annually," he said. "In addition, they eat young forest trees and severely reduce our forests' ability to regenerate."

Proposed changes to the hunt include:

• Starting the antlerless rifle season on the Saturday after Thanksgiving, followed by a concurrent two-week season for antlered and antlerless deer, starting on Monday.

• Changing the "private lands" tag so that hunters can apply for a second antlerless deer permit if available in a specific county.

• Opening the muzzleloader "antlerless-only" deer season earlier (Oct. 18-20) and allowing senior and junior hunters, disabled hunters and active duty military personnel to use any sporting rifle to take does if they have the proper permits.

Overall, the changes will increase the doe hunt by 11 days, San Julian said. With fewer female deer available to breed, competition among bucks should increase — resulting in fawns being born in a shorter time.

"We kill more than 80 percent of all the bucks in the population each hunting season," he said. "It is hoped that hunters who just want to put venison in the freezer will take advantage of the first day of doe season."

Opening the season for three Saturdays also gives hunters more weekend days to get out in the field, San Julian noted. Hunters will have more time to be selective in choosing a larger doe or a bigger buck. The antlerless season also will no longer be so weather-dependent.

"In addition, the commission wants to see if starting the doe season on Saturday will make bucks more wary and not such easy targets on opening day," he said. "If so, we may be able to carry more bucks through the winter and improve the buck-to-doe ratio."

To comment on the deer hunt proposals, send written correspondence to the Pennsylvania Game Commission, Attn: Deer Season Comments, Bureau of Information and Education, Harrisburg, PA 17110-9797. Submit comments no later than March 30 to have them added to the public statement.

For more information on the new regulations, or updates to the state's deer management program, see the Pennsylvania Game Commission's Website at http://www.pgc.state.pa.us/.

Lancaster Conservation District Honors Cooperators, Businesses

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — About 240 producers and friends of the Lancaster County Conservation District attended the 50th annual dinner meeting last week here at Yoder's Restaurant.

Kenneth D. Myer, Myerose Farm, Elizabethtown, was honored as the 2001 Outstanding Cooperator.

Kenneth spoke about his father's love for conservation, placing in contour strips at the farm as early as the 1940s.

Kenneth's father, Samuel, began installing terraces and contours to the farm more than half a century ago.

As for contours, "customer operators don't like them and it takes longer to farm them," said Kenneth. "But I don't have a gutter on the farm."

Installing additional contours was the "best thing I ever did in 22 years I had to farm," he said.

Kenneth has performed additional environmental improvements to the farm. In the fall of 1999, he built a new concrete barnyard, complete with new spouting, downspouts, and curbing.

He grows corn and hay. Conservation tillage, use of winter grain cover crops, grassed waterways, and keeping hay in the rotation all work together under a sound nutrient management system.

Today the 131-acre operation is home to a 70-cow dairy herd (Holsteins, many of them Red and White), 65 replacement heifers, and several goats.

Livengood's Produce Farm, Lancaster, was honored with the 2001 Soil Stewardship Award. The Livengood Farm consists of 11.2 acres on the side of the hill with slopes that range from 10-16 percent.

According to Gerald Heistand of the district, "When you subtract out the land area for buildings, grass buffers, and waterways, there are only about eight acres of tillable land."

Earl Livengood's father, Phares, grew vegetables in plots laid out in small square blocks and sold the produce in Lancaster. Phares worked in their shop as a blacksmith.

But as the work in the shop decreased and the children grew up, the family decided to return to vegetable production. In 1992, Earl got a one-time offer to rent a table at the Reading Terminal in Philadelphia. Eventually, he began selling at a market in Harrisburg. Now, the Livengoods are in their fifth year of being certified organic.

Organic farming, according to Earl, "captures the heartbeat of soil conservation by preserving and building soil structure. (It) is natural farming."

Earl and Joyce Livengood have three sons, Dwayne, Dale, and Dean.

Other awards were presented. They included the Conservation Agency Award, which was given to Dr. John Schwartz, former Lancaster and now York County extension director; District Conservation Service awards to Mark Metzler and Charlotte "Chotty" Sprenkle, former employees of the district; The Environmental Education Award to Kerrie Snavely, a teacher at Conestoga Valley High School; Conservation of Natural Resources awards to The Shoppes and Inn at Leola Village and Highlands at Warwick; a Community Improvement Award to Perelman Park; and the 2001 Youth Conservation School Award to Gene Witman, Julie Dippner, and Neal Wenger.

The district honored the Hammer Creek Watershed Association with the Watershed Award for excellence in watershed restoration.

Nancy Burkhart, of whom Donald Robinson, district administrator, refers to as "conservation ambassador extraordinaire," was honored for 35 years of faithful service to the Lancaster County Conservation District at the banquet.

Conservation School and Educator awards were presented to, from left, Neal Wenger, Julie Dippner, Gene Witman, Youth Conservation School awards, and Kerrie Snavely, Environmental Education Award.

State Grange Members To Meet With Federal Legislators

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — About 100 Pennsylvania State Grangers will visit with their federal legislators during the annual Washington Legislative Tour to discuss issues concerning agriculture and rural affairs.

Among the issues to be discussed Wednesday and Thursday during the annual visit with U.S. Congressmen and Senators are tax reform, revitalization of the Social Security system, education reform, and expansion of telecommunication services in rural area, among others.

The Pennsylvania State Grange, with more than 30,000 members in 450 Grange chapters across the commonwealth, is dedicated to improving the lives of rural Pennsylvanians through legislative action, grass-roots initiatives, community service, and member services such as financial planning, a credit union, and insurance programs.

Brenda Shambaugh, Pennsylvania State Grange legislative director, said the Washington tour presents an opportunity for individual Grange members to voice their position on issues being considered by federal legislators.

"The visit to Washington is also to speak out on behalf of the National Grange's Blueprint for Rural America," Shambaugh said. "The 10-point plan is designed to revitalize and enhance rural America in the new millennium. The blueprint is part of the National Grange's program called "A New Century, A New Grange."

The Grange believes Congress should reform the federal tax system to assure preservation of family farms and businesses through the elimination of estate and capital gains taxes and institute user taxes to offset costs of federal programs. National Grange officials presented statistics that show that it takes $3 in costs to collect $1 of estate tax following an individual's death.

"A new system is needed to assure that all wealth bears its just and equal payment to the government," Shambaugh said. "A family farm is a family business and plays a key role in the economic well-being of rural areas across America. The Grange also seeks immediate 100 percent deductibility for health insurance premiums paid by farmers and other self-employed individuals."

Another blueprint issue is the revitalization of rural schools through federal partnerships.

The National Grange supports using tax incentives to promote federal/state partnerships. The Grange believes in flexibility and innovative capital financing programs for rural public schools, telecommunications as a learning tool, and utilization of long-distance learning.

"Such partnerships should protect and retain local control since traditionally, school construction and renovations have been the sole province of state and local governments," Shambaugh said. "Federal partnerships will help improve the health of rural economics, which are often dependent upon a quality learning environment."

Farmers Union Urges Renewable Fuels Policy

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Before the conclusion of the National Farmers Union (NFU) 99th anniversary convention, delegates from across the country reasserted the family farmer and rancher organization's commitment to a national renewable fuels standard (RFS).

The establishment of an RFS will triple the demand for ethanol and will create new markets for biodiesel and other farm commodities.

"In the past year, we have seen fuel and energy prices skyrocket out of control while commodity prices remain at crisis levels," said NFU President Leland Swenson. "What we are calling for will help increase market prices for commodities, enhance the security of our fuel supply, and ensure the availability of gas and diesel additives that help the environment."

New policy adoptions include the establishment of an RFS that requires a minimum of four percent of the U.S. fuel supply be derived from renewable commodities. The policy also supports creating a Renewable Fuels Energy Reserve equal to one year's use of ethanol and biodiesel.

The commodities reserve would be stored on the farm. Producers would be compensated for storage and eligible for commodity loans for this purpose.

"This program would serve to reduce price-depressing supplies of farm commodities and help resolve our nation's energy crisis," said Swenson. "It makes perfect sense to provide incentives to make this multi-purposed, public policy initiative successful."

Applications Available For Environmental Excellence Award

PITTSBURGH (Allegheny Co.) — Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) Regional Director Charles Duritsa recently encouraged environmental leaders, including employers, local governments and individuals, to apply for the 2001 Governor's Award for Environmental Excellence by the May 4 deadline.

"Gov. Tom Ridge created these awards to recognize Pennsylvania's environmental leaders for their efforts in preserving and enhancing our environ ment," Duritsa said. "Each year, the winners of the award demonstrate the positive relationship between protecting our natural resources and strengthening our economy."

Since January 1997, the 132 award winners have realized $460 million in cost savings. And they have reduced wastewater by 3.3 billion gallons, solid waste by 93 million tons, air emissions by 88 million tons and saved more than 40 million kilowatt hours of electricity. The numbers continue to grow because they are annual savings.

Since 1996, Gov. Ridge has presented the Governor's Award for Environmental Excellence to Pennsylvania's leaders in innovative green technologies and environmental management. The awards honor individuals, businesses, municipalities and institutions working to benefit Pennsylvania's environment and economy.

Any Pennsylvania business, government agency, municipality, organization, individual, farm or agribusiness engaged in pollution prevention, recycling or energy efficiency efforts in the Commonwealth is eligible to participate in the Governor's Award for Environmental Excellence.

A portion of the project must have been implemented during 2001 to be eligible. Awards will be issued for projects in four categories: Resource Protection; Land Use; Energy Efficiency; and Education and Outreach.

To submit or download a 2001 Governor's Award application electronically or to find out more information on the awards program including descriptions and video clips of previous winners, visit DEP through the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us or directly at www.dep.state.pa.us (directLINK "2001 Application").

Lehman will graduate in May 2001. Penn State's Poultry Club also won the 2001 National Best Scrapbook Award. the scrapbooks, put together by clubs all over the country, highlight their local clubs' activities during each academic year.

Livestock

Jameson Walker and Kevin Harvatine were recently named National Block and Bridle Outstanding senior and junior, respectively, at the club's annual convention.

Walker, who graduated in dairy and animal science with the highest GPA among the college's seniors, served as college marshal at the May 2000 graduation. Harvatine will earn his bachelor's degree in animal sciences in May 2001.

Dairy

Heather (Oberholtzer) Hostetter, who works for Monsanto Dairy Business in Minnesota, was the winner of the Dairy Shrine Student Recognition Award given during the 2000 World Dairy Exposition in Madison, Wis. This award is given to the top dairy science undergraduate in the country. Hostetter earned her bachelor's degree in dairy and animal science in May 2000.

National Beef Quiz Bowl Team

The College's 2001 Beef Quiz Bowl Team — with members Curtis Beidel, Tia Crider, Mark Hazelton, and Doug Koontz — competed and won first place at the National Collegiate Beef Quiz Bowl at the National Cattlemen's Beef Association's annual convention. Crider received her degree in dairy and animal science in December 2000. The other members will graduate in animal sciences in May 2001.

According to coach Jana Peters, who accompanied the team, the college has represented the northeast region at the competition for eight of the past nine years and has won first place five times.

"The fact that Penn State has dominated this contest speaks to the quality of our students, as well as to the quality and rigor of instruction that they receive," she said. "Our students excel academically. They also are prepared in the practical aspects of production agriculture, which is apparent during the contests as question topics range from applied beef management to reproductive physiology."

In 1999, the college combined the majors in dairy and animal science and poultry management and technology into an interdepartmental animal sciences program. This new major — which covers beef and dairy cattle, companion animals, horses, poultry, sheep, and swine — equips students with the latest, most relevant skills for the changing animal industry.

For more information on the major, contact Jana Peters by phone at (814) 863-4198 or by e-mail at jp9@psu.edu.

Corn Growers Say USDA Program Helps Ensure 2001 Crop Integrity

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) welcomed USDA's announcement recently that the federal agency would buy seed corn containing the Cry9C or StarLink protein.

"This is another important step in a coordinated effort between industry and government to remove Cry9C and to assure the integrity of the 2001 corn crop," said Fred Yoder, a farmer from Plain City, Ohio, and chairman of the NCGA Biotechnology Working Group.

"But growers still have two responsibilities for 2001. We still need to ask for verification that the seed we buy for planting this year has been tested for Cry9C and we must control volunteer StarLink corn in 2001," Yoder emphasized.

USDA announced recommended testing procedures for Cry9C in late December. Starting in January, the NCGA has stressed seed testing through its Verify Before You Buy program. "Asking seed companies for this verification holds them accountable and shows that farmers are fulfilling our obligations to manage StarLink, too," he said.

The American Seed Trade Association (ASTA) has estimated that less than one percent of seed corn for 2001 may contain Cry9C protein.

USDA is buying the seed under its authority to reduce costs associated with the potential forfeiture of loan-eligible crops. The program will benefit the smaller seed companies. Major seed companies have indicated they will not ask for government payment but will continue to test their seed and to remove any seed lots that test positive for Cry9C.

The USDA program will spend between $15 million to $20 million to ensure that companies not affiliated with Aventis, or licensed to sell StarLink seed, but whose seed inadvertently contained the Cry9C protein, are not adversely affected.

Painter, Holmes Retire After Lifelong Service To The American Angus Association

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — Don Painter, director of member services and office manager for the American Angus Association, and Donna Holmes, assistant director of member services and assistant office manager for the American Angus Association, will retire May 1 after serving the association and its members for a combined 88 years, reports Richard L. Spader, executive vice president of the American Angus Association.

"Both Don and Donna have been the heartbeat of this office for more than 40 years," says Spader. "Breeders that have had the opportunity to work with them realize their commitment to the American Angus Association and its members and their lifelong commitment to the Angus breed. Their knowledge and expertise on Association policy and rules, as well as the special needs of breeders, will be greatly missed on a day-to-day basis."

Painter began June 25, 1956, when the association had just relocated from the Chicago Stockyards and opened its doors for the first time in St. Joseph. From that day forward, Painter has worked diligently to see that breeder's requests were fulfilled, rules were enforced and business was done in a timely manner.

Under Painter's reign as director of membership services, the association has offered one-day turnaround time on business submitted without errors by members. This commitment to service is unsurpassed by breed associations of any species. Painter has also overseen many changes in the way work is processed at the Association, from typing individual pedigrees by hand to the efficiency of the current PC-based RODEO system.

Holmes began her tenure with the Association in January 1958 as an employee in the checking department working under Don Painter, which was the beginning of a working partnership that would last a lifetime. At that time, the checking department handled all correspondence with the members by mail and there was only one phone in the department. Today employees in the checking department work with breeders over the phone or by e-mail to resolve problems and answer questions.

Grafting Wildlife Trees

FINDLAY, N.Y. — A workshop is slated for persons interested in learning how to graft fruit and nut trees to benefit wildlife.

An intermediate workshop is scheduled for Saturday, March 24 in Findlay, N.Y. This workshop will focus on nut trees. Called "Grafting and Tending Trees to Benefit Wildlife," the workshop will not only teach technique but also how to make grafting efforts count for wildlife. Research shows that wildlife benefits from a variety of species.

• According to Malcolm Olson, a Forest Stewardship VIP and owner of the region's largest nut tree farm, "One way to increase plant diversity is to revitalize old apple trees and plant nut trees." Trees such as these are a veritable grocery store for wildlife year after year.

The workshop will take place from 1 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. Preregistration is required. Cost is $3. Call Penn State Warren County Cooperative Extension at (814) 563-9388 for registration information. If you anticipate needing any type of accommodation or have questions about the physical access provided, please contact Adam K. Downing at (814) 563-9388 in advance of your participation or visit.

Ohio Barn Conference II April 6-7

COLUMBUS, Ohio — People who would like to know what types of trees grew in their area more than 100 years ago should visit an old barn, said Charles Whitney, The Barn Consultant.

"Old barns are one of the best records we have of trees that grew in the areas where they were built," Whitney said. "A lot of the old timbers used to build them started growing in the 1600s and 1700s to be big enough to be in these barns."

Whitney is one of several presenters who will share ideas and suggestions of how to renovate and maintain old barns at the Ohio Barn Conference II, April 6-7 at Fisher Auditorium on the grounds of Ohio State University's Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center in Wooster.

The event features a full-day conference and trade show on Friday, April 6, and a tour of Wayne County barns on Saturday, April 7. Last year, more than 200 people from six states attended the first Ohio Barn Conference, and more than 300 are expected this year.

Whitney will open the conference with a philosophical discussion of why old barns should be saved.

"Barns are icons of history that are indicators of where this country came from," Whitney said. "So it's important that at least some of them be preserved."

From Mt. Vernon and known as The Barn Consultant, he charges a $95 fee to walk barn owners through a structure, explain its construction and original purpose, point out structural problems, and make recommendations of how to preserve and reconstruct it for modern use. For an extra $15, he also provides a written report that explains his recommendations and identifies various historic or structural aspects of the barn.

Whitney has worked with more than 150 old barns in the past two years. Probably 70 percent of the barn owners are people who purchased an old house and barn on five to 10 acres and do not know what to do with the old barn, he said.

Here are the three options Whitney suggests. First, if at all possible, preserve the barn. Second, if it has to come down, get it in the hands of someone who will dismantle it and use the old frames somewhere else for a house or barn. Finally, if it must come down, re-saw the timbers so they can be sold as antique wood for flooring, molding or other purposes.

The Ohio Barn Conference II is for barn owners, buyers, sellers, builders, dismantlers and those who are just fascinated by the lore of old barns, said Jim Skeeles, agriculture and natural resources and community development agent at the Lorain County office of Ohio State University Extension who helped plan the event.

"We've had BarnAgain Programs to introduce to people how to renovate and what they might do to preserve their barns," Skeeles said. "The Ohio Barn Conference is designed to go a step further, revel in our past and enjoy some of the old barns of Ohio and their history."

The conference will begin at 9:30 a.m. on April 6. Topics include experiences in reworking a barn, the ethnic input in Ohio barns, dismantling and rebuilding a barn, the preservation of ancient English tithing barns, and Pennsylvania barns from Switzerland to Ohio. A roundtable discussion involving all the speakers also is scheduled to allow participants to ask questions.

A trade show will run throughout the day on April 6 for industry people to present their services and wares, Skeeles said. The approximately 20 exhibitors will include renovation, consulting and design services.

The first day of the conference will end at 5 p.m. with a discussion aimed at possibly forming an Ohio Barn Organization. The group's goal will be to promote communication among people interested in old barns and conduct future Ohio Barn Conferences.

The tour on April 7 starts at 9 a.m. and will be hosted by Rudy and Laura Christian, timber framers from Burbank, Ohio. People must attend the conference both days to participate in the tour.

"For those who are interested in old barns, it will be an excellent tours, because of the expertise of Rudy and Laura Christian and the many excellent old barns in Wayne County," Skeeles said.

The event is sponsored by Ohio State University Extension, Charles Whitney, Rudy Christian plus a committee of several Extension agents and a representative from the Ohio Historical Preservation Office.

Registration for the Ohio Barn Conference II is $35 per person with handouts and lunch. Spouses can attend for $20, with lunch and no handouts. Registration is required by March 23.

For more information about the Ohio Barn Conference II, those interested can contact Skeeles at the Lorain County office of Ohio State University Extension at (440) 326-5851, Whitney at (740) 393-2246, or Rudy Christian at (330) 624-7282.

ASA Voting Delegates Set Policy Direction

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — To determine the policy direction for the American Soybean Association (ASA), 130 soybean farmers from across the U.S. assembled here during the sixth annual Commodity Classic Convention and Trade Show.

Participants included board members, voting delegates, and other members of the ASA who were on hand to review and amend the document that will guide the ASA for the next year as it pursues initiatives designed to improve soybean farmer profitability.

Noteworthy among these modifications are 2002 Farm Bill issues, support for agricultural research, expanded biodiesel initiatives, and for the first time, a resolution addressing the need for affordable broadband Internet access to the farm.

ASA supports making soybeans eligible for production flexibility contracts or similar payments in the 2002 Farm Bill. Soybeans are grown on 28 percent of the cropland in this country, and soybeans represent the highest value U.S. agricultural export. ASA believes soybeans should be included in any type of production flexibility contract that may be adopted in the new Farm Bill.

The soybean marketing loan should be a major soybean program component and be maintained at a minimum of $5.26 per bushel. The soybean marketing loan program has provided a critical safety net for producers in recent years during times of historically low prices. The current soybean loan rate formula, which was established under the Federal Agriculture Improvement and Reform (FAIR) Act of 1996, uses a five-year "Olympic" average price that disregards the highest and lowest years. The floor was set at $4.92 and the cap was set at $5.26. The prevailing rate for crop years 1997, 1998, 1999, and 2000 was $5.26.

ASA supports the efforts of the national Council on Food and Agricultural Research (C-FAR). The goal of C-FAR is to double Federal funding of food, agricultural, and natural resources research and education programs the next five years to a total of $5 billion.

The level of research funding at the USDA is about $2.1 billion, and it is estimated that there is about another $300 to $400 million of research at other federal agencies that deal with agriculture.

Delegates also modified several resolutions pertaining to biodiesel. ASA supports the testing and promotion of biofuels made with soybean oil to help bring biodiesel fuel and biodiesel blends, and biodiesel additives to the marketplace. ASA supports the efforts of individual states to enact biodiesel or biodiesel blend requirements within their state.

ASA supports and endorses the inclusion of soybeans and soybean-based product applications and blends of such products in the development and implementation of any potential alternative fuel policy programs.

ASA encourages legislation that supports biodiesel and biodiesel blends with respect to all federal and state energy programs, and ASA strongly urges that all state and federal diesel vehicles use a biodiesel fuel or a biodiesel blend.

ASA recommends that low-blend biodiesel be accepted as a national energy policy in order to promote domestic renewable energy resources, protect engine warranties and service life as a result of improved lubricity, and provide nontoxic fuel source activities.

ASA believes that universal access to the Internet is important to the quality of life in rural America and to strong and competitive farming operations. Therefore, ASA will urge federal and state governments to develop programs that will encourage private businesses and cooperatives to bring broadband access to farms at affordable rates.

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — New Holland's self-propelled FX forage harvesters can be equipped with an optional CropPro™ Plus crop processor which chops and processes corn silage in one operation.

For convenience and easy operation, the CropPro™ Plus crop processor can be engaged and disengaged right from the cab by simply pushing a button.

The optional crop processor module, which is placed between the cutterhead and blower, crushes and cracks corn kernels and shears cobs and stems to produce silage that is higher in effective fiber and easier to digest. That results in higher milk production without the cost of additional feed or supplements and without the expense and process time of a stationary roller mill.

New Holland offers three FX self-propelled forage harvesters ranging from 346 hp to 525 hp.

certificate certifying that none of their cattle or other ruminant animals have been fed any feed containing protein derived from ruminant tissues and/or that none of the livestock being sold have illegal levels of drug residues," according to the letter.

In addition, "for some packers and buyers to purchase your cattle, we will need to have the enclosed certification signed and on file prior to or at the time you bring your cattle to the market for sale." The certification papers were sent with the letter.

Weist noted in the letter, "I very much regret the concern and inconvenience that the packer certification requirement may cause you, but I very much value you as a customer and look forward to continuing to meet your marketing needs."

Processors who have asked for the compliance papers include Keystone Foods, Bala Cynwyd, suppliers to the McDonald's system; Shapiro Packing Company, Augusta, Ga.; and Martin's Abattoir and Wholesale Meats, Inc., Godwin, N.C.

Weist noted that local packers, including Moyer's and Taylor's, are working on plans for suppliers.

The Livestock Marketing Association (LMA) recently requested a compliance date in March, but a compromise date of April 1 has been recently established.

A recent Associated Press (AP) report noted that McDonald's has been particularly sensitive to the BSE controversy.

According to information posted on a Website, www.madcow.org, an Associated Press story points to McDonald's, which has ordered its beef suppliers to ensure that the cattle they buy are fed in accordance with federal restrictions.

The fast-food giant, according to the AP story, has given meatpackers until April 1 to document compliance with the rules.

Until the industry comes up with some type of "prion detector," a way of detecting the presence of the BSE-causing protein in the animal, other ways of screening for the disease must be devised.

LMA Posts Compliance Options

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Livestock Marketing Association (LMA) recently posted the following certification recommendations.

Memorandum
To: LMA Member Markets
Date: March 1, 2001
Subject: Certification Of Compliance With FDA Ban On Feeding Of Ruminant Materials To Cattle

BSE/Ruminant Feed Restrictions

In 1997, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) adopted a regulation, 21 CFR 589.2000, prohibiting the feeding of most mammalian/ruminant derived protein (e.g. meat and bone meal) to cattle and other ruminants. This regulation resulted from efforts to control any possible introduction or spread of Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy (BSE) or, as the media often refers to it, "Mad Cow Disease" into the domestic cattle herd of the United States.

Packers Require Certification To Buy Cattle

Because of recent worldwide media attention on the BSE issue and a desire to reassure consumers that all possible steps are being taken to continue to keep BSE out of the United States, a number of beef packers/processors and retail operations (IBP, ConAgra, Excel and the McDonalds Corporation, etc.) have established certification programs for their suppliers to insure that they are not receiving cattle that have been fed prohibited ruminant derived protein materials.

Participating packers in the certification program have made it clear that they will not purchase any cattle from producers who have not signed a statement certifying that none of their cattle or other ruminant animals have been fed any feed containing prohibited protein derived from mammalian/ruminant tissues and/or that none of their livestock have illegal levels of drug residues.

Market/Dealer Compliance Options

While complying with this new certification program will be burdensome on us all, it appears that the marketing sector is left with three equally difficult choices:

1. Markets and dealers can refuse to sign the certificates themselves and refuse to get certificates from their sellers, in which case certain packers and order buyers will refuse to buy at those markets or from those dealers; or

2. Markets and dealers can sign the packers' certificates themselves, in which case the markets and dealers run the risk of both significant civil and criminal liability if the cattle are found to have either been fed prohibited mammalian/ruminant derived protein or to have illegal levels of drug residues; or

3. The markets can get and keep on file the attached "Owner's Certificate" establishing a seller's compliance with the FDA feed ban and drug residue requirements.

Option Three, The Best Choice

It is our suggestion that in order to comply with the packers' certification demands and to avoid assuming the producer's liability, that you choose option three. Because a number of packers are also requesting certification that the cattle do not have illegal levels of drug residues, the suggested "Owner's Certificate," encompasses both FDA's feed ban and drug residue rules. (Please note: the language contained in the enclosed "Owner's and Market/Dealer Certificates," approved by LMA legal counsel, has been accepted by all the major livestock industry groups, including the American Meat Institute and National Meat Association (organizations representing most packers). Therefore, it should be acceptable to most any packer requiring producer certification thus eliminating the need for multiple certification statements.)

Suggestions for Obtaining "Owner Certificates"

There are two forms of the "Owner's Certificate" enclosed. How you implement the certification program into your operation will likely dictate whether you use one or both of the forms. The shorter "Owner's Certificate" would be used as an attachment or printed on your check-in or bill-in sheets/cards and signed by the owner as they check in their cattle on sale day. (Please note: truckers or other persons signing the certification statement for the owner puts you and those persons at risk for civil and criminal liability. Thus, they should get a signed certificate from the owner for their own records or to present to the market at check-in.) The longer "Owner's Certificate—Continuing," would be signed by the seller one-time and would cover all cattle sold through your facility thereafter or until it is revoked by the seller.

Participating packers and other buyers will ask you to certify that the sellers/owners of the livestock being purchased by them have signed a certification statement. Thus, we are providing you with a "Market/Dealer's Certificate" that auction markets and dealers can sign and submit to their buyers with each shipment establishing that they have obtained the necessary certificates from their sellers/owners and have them on file. Or, if the buyer wants a one-time certificate that applies to all cattle delivered to them thereafter by that market or dealer, use the "Market/Dealer — Continuing" form.

Recommended Actions

- Initiate a certification program with your sellers and buyers by April 1. (Although a number of packers have already sent letters to their suppliers requesting this certification by early March, all the major livestock organizations, including the packers, have agreed to April 1 as the implementation date.)
- Send a letter to your customers explaining the certification program and what you are asking them to sign.
- Maintain a record of all the certifications that you receive.
- Permit the FDA, upon request, to review all records related to enforcement of the FDA ban on feeding of mammalian/ruminant derived protein materials to cattle and animal drug use. (Please Note: some packers may ask to review your certification records to verify that their certification program and yours is working. Since this is not a regulatory program, it is completely within your discretion as to how you respond to any such request from the packers.)

Safety of the food supply is of paramount importance to us all. While this latest food safety effort will involve considerable additional work and inconvenience to the markets and dealers as well as our customers, we must all do our part to assure high consumer confidence in the meat supply. If you have any questions in this regard, please contact Nancy Robinson, LMA's VP for Industry Affairs at (800) 821-2048 or e-mail, nrobinson@lmaweb.com; or LMA Counsel, Ernie Van Hooser, at (816) 322-8000 or e-mail, evanhooser@cdinc.net.

USDA To Purchase Cry9C Affected Corn Seed From Small Seed Companies

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA, through its Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC), recently announced it will immediately offer to purchase hybrid corn seed containing the protein Cry9C from small corn seed companies.

This program, estimated to cost between $15 and $20 million, is another step taken by the federal government in a coordinated effort with producers, agribusiness, and the food industry to contain the movement of corn seed with the protein Cry9C to ensure it is not planted this spring.

USDA will purchase the corn seed to ensure that companies not affiliated with Aventis, or licensed to sell the StarLink seed, but whose seed inadvertently contained the Cry9C protein, are not adversely affected. This offer does not extend to those companies licensed by Aventis, the registrant of StarLink to sell hybrid seed corn containing this protein.

Recently some seed companies reported finding isolated occurrences of extremely low levels of Cry9C in seed originally intended for sale this year. Based on aggregate information voluntarily provided by the American Seed Trade Association (ASTA), of those companies reporting, it is estimated that less than one percent of corn seeds for 2001 planting, may contain Cry9C protein.

Companies involved have recovered and taken control of all lots of hybrid corn seed found to have this protein. Seed companies routinely test their products for impurities and many took steps to detect Cry9C before USDA recommended testing procedures on December 29, 2000.

Major seed companies have informed USDA of their intent to continue following recommended testing procedures designed to detect Cry9C, and USDA will monitor this activity. In the event Cry9C is found, these companies will not sell the corn seed for planting and not submit requests for payment to USDA.

USDA will inform farmers of these actions through various information channels, and will encourage farmers to ask for verification that their seed has been tested before buying it.

Because of the relatively small amount of seed involved, this action will not affect the price or the availability of corn seed this year.

Details of the purchase offer will be sent directly to seed corn companies this week including actions that the companies will need to take to receive payment from CCC.

'Chicken Holiday' This Fall Could Help Stop Avian Influenza

bird markets.

They include New York City, New Jersey, and Philadelphia LBMs.

In recent memory, according to David Kradel of the PennAg Poultry Council, every time the LBMs were tested, 40 percent came back positive for A.I virus.

Kradel and others spoke about the efforts to stem A.I. and the history of A.I. Monday afternoon at the Penn State-sponsored Poultry Management and Health Seminar at Kreider's Restaurant.

About three dozen poultry producers and agri-industry representatives watched a 25-minute videotape, "Avian Influenza: Preventing the Spread of Disease," at the seminar.

Kradel wrote the video, made from a $20,000 USDA Special Needs grant obtained by Penn State in 1998.

With eight billion broilers and 70 billion eggs manufactured each year, according to the video's narrator, A.I. is especially dangerous because, under certain conditions, the A.I. viruses can "change and cause very devastating diseases."

In 1983-1984, a highly pathogenic type of virus was so catastrophic it literally wiped out thousands of birds. To stop the disease, 17 million chickens were killed at a cost of $62 million.

These days, an outbreak of that magnitude could cost between $250 million to $300 million, noted Kradel.

The "chicken holiday," with complete closure of the markets, will pay in terms of breaking the cycle of disease infection. Live bird markets have long been known to be carriers of and transmitters of the A.I. virus.

Different levels of pathology, from nonpathogenic to highly pathogenic, have been observed in different A.I. virus strains. The real worry: could the virus mutate and become deadly, going from nonpathogenic to highly pathogenic, in a short period of time?

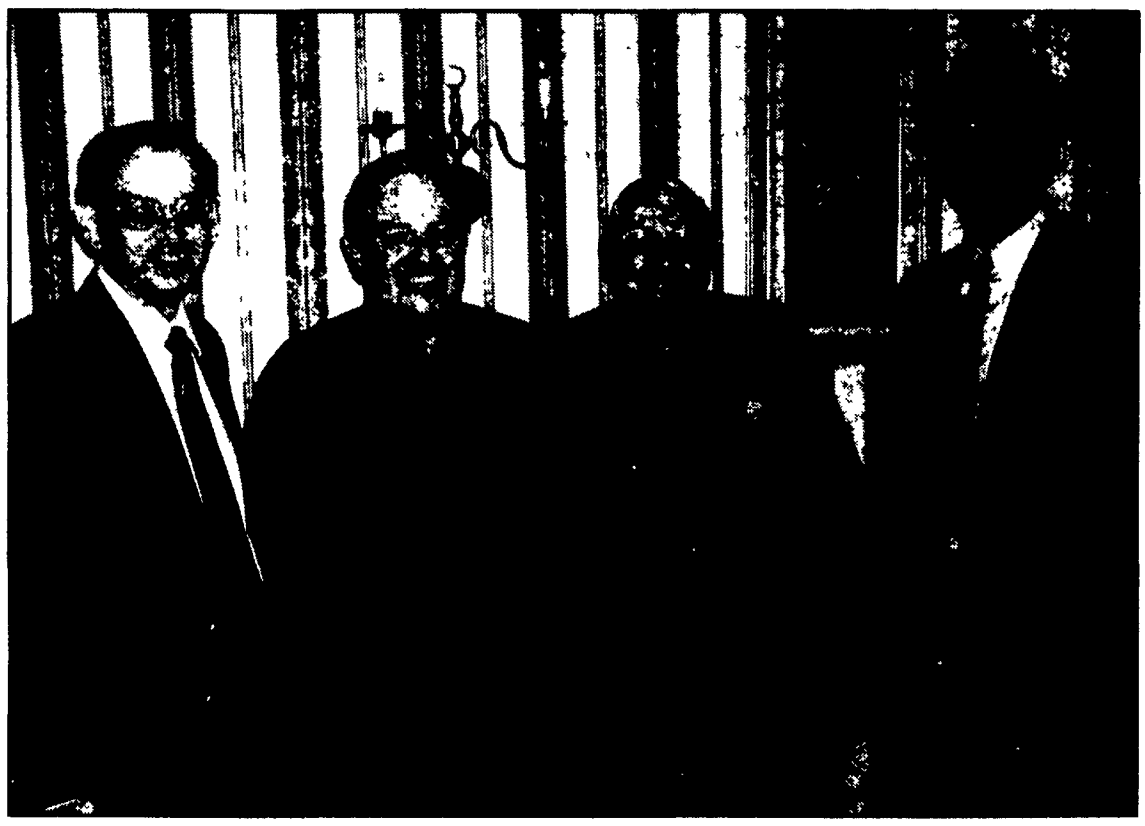
Virus on animal manure can be deadly: feces the size of a dime can infect a million birds, according to the video.

The video points out that any A.I. virus could bring the perception in the minds that it could be a danger to human health. There has been a concern that the virus could, through mutation, be transmitted to humans and be a human health threat.

Lowering that risk could go a long way toward preventing "immeasurable economic harm" or threat to poultry and public health, according to the video.

The virus can also threaten farms that keep swine and poultry. A strain of virus, H1N1, is present in swine herds and can mutate to poultry as H1N2. There's also a concern that H1N2 can cross over to turkeys, Kradel noted. Forty percent of swine tested for pseudorabies have tested position for the swine A.I. serotype.

Kradel noted that USDA should put a priority on developing a recombinant vaccine that could be easily administered to flocks. The cost is estimated to be about $6 million.



Those who have battled the avian influenza (A.I.) virus past and present watched a 25-minute video on preventing A.I. Monday at Kreider's. From left, John Schwartz, York County extension director; John Hoffman, former director (retired) of the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation, which is known as the PennAg Poultry Council; Jay Irwin, long-time Lancaster County extension director, retired; and Bob Elkin, Penn State Poultry Science department head. Photo by Andy Andrews

Lancaster County Association Receives Growing Greener Grant To Assist Amish Farmers

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) Southcentral Regional Director Michael Steiner recently congratulated Paradise Sportsmen Association in Salisbury Township, Lancaster County, for receiving $151,000 Growing Greener grant to restore the Pequea Creek watershed.

"This Growing Greener project fits perfectly into the equation as the type of work that will ultimately restore Pequea Creek to a healthy stream," Steiner said. "Pequea Creek has become impaired due to years of unrestricted access by dairy cows, which has left the stream banks unvegetated, barren and eroding. The association is enthusiastic about the project and is grateful for the support of the Amish community, which recognizes this as an opportunity for everyone to benefit and learn from since the problems affect both water and pastureland."

The association will restore 2,800 feet of Pequea Creek on several Amish farms in the area by installing fencing to exclude cattle; creating cattle crossings; placing in-stream structures to combat erosion; planting trees and shrubs along the stream; and improving fish habitat.

According to Steiner, the Paradise Sportsmen Association is a group of dedicated conservationists that has received county awards in the past for stream restoration efforts, and has completed work on a voluntary level as well.

For more information on Growing Greener, visit DEP through the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us or visit the Growing Greener Website directly at www.growinggreener.org.

Penn State Scientist Says Mad Cow Disease Unlikely Threat

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE), better known as "mad cow disease," is front-page news in the U.S. as European countries struggle to control the disease's spread in their cattle.

But an expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences said American shoppers don't have to worry when buying beef.

"The worst may be over for United States and Europe," said Lawrence Hutchinson, professor of veterinary science. "Corrective measures seem to be working. In North America, we've prohibited animal by-products in feed, and banned importing these for any use in this country.

We think those two barriers prevented animals in the U.S. from being exposed to BSE. "We also examine any animals that sicken or die of diseases of the brain or nervous system," he said. "In every case where the cause isn't known, samples of the animal are tested at the National Animal Disease Center in Iowa. To date, of more than 17,000 samples submitted, all have been negative."

Hutchinson said BSE in the United Kingdom has dropped from more than 24,000 cases in the peak year (1994) to about 1,300 cases last year, thanks to stringent quarantine and culling tactics, combined with the prohibition of all animal by-products in cattle feed. Because the disease has an incubation period of two to eight year, the control measures should finally be taking hold. But projections for BSE's future, he said are hard to predict.

"At this point, we feel very good about the fact that we're not finding any signs of disease, so meat products raised here in the United States are very safe from BSE," Hutchinson said. "But we have to be very concerned when we see it moving out of England and into other European countries. With world trade being so diverse today, it takes constant vigilance to keep it from coming in. British experts feel they will continue to have sporadic cases for the next four or five years. They're very hopeful that within five years all of the living animals that may be incubating this disease will either have been destroyed or identified as positive."

BSE originated in Great Britain when dairy cattle were fed meat and bone meal rendered from sheep carcasses infected with scrapie, a spongiform encephalopathy that occurs in certain sheep breeds. Hutchinson explains that, while the disease sprang from improper sanitary procedures, the accepted practice of feeding rendered parts to cattle is effective and efficient.

"Cattle feed contains rendered carcasses for two reasons," Hutchinson said. "One, we can make efficient use of something that would otherwise have to go into landfills and pollute soil. Rendered by-products also contain proteins that are valuable in cattle diets. However, the growth of BSE has made this a poor practice, so in recent years feeding any ruminant protein source to cattle in the United States has been prohibited."

Hutchinson said consumers who still worry about the safety of beef can count on an additional reassurance.

"Even in areas where BSE is prevalent, we think that the meat itself is not the problem," he said. "It's the contamination of the meat with brain or spinal cord tissue. But most cuts of beef that are purely beef muscle are very unlikely to be contaminated. In a BSE-free country such as the United States, consumers enjoying beef muscle cuts such as roasts and steaks can be well assured that BSE is not present in their beef."

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

tion. January 2001 milk production in 20 major states was down 1.5 percent from a year ago. December revised milk production was down 0.7 percent. What really got people scared was that USDA revised the cow number figures for last year.

The number of cows on farms for 20 major dairy states had actually declined from a high of 7.821 million head in July 2000 to 7.791 million head by January 2001. That is a six-month decline in cow numbers. Also, milk per cow in January 2001 for 20 major dairy states was down 1.8 percent. Milk per cow was down 3 percent in California alone.

Less milk resulted in slower growth in cheese production. Cheese production in January 2001 was down 5.1 percent for American types, up 6.4 percent for Mozzarella, and down 1.2 percent for all cheese. Cleary there was some reduction in cheese production in January.

The big question is, how long will the milk supply be in a slump? Will cow numbers continue to decline? Will milk production per cow continue to be weak? If the answers are yes, look for milk prices to strengthen. If the answer is maybe, it would be advisable to lock in some of these higher futures prices before milk prices erode any further.

Bulbs, Buds And Blooms At Philadelphia Flower Show

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

PHILADELPHIA — Walking through an imposing Egyptian gate may not be the introduction to the flower displays that visitors were expecting.

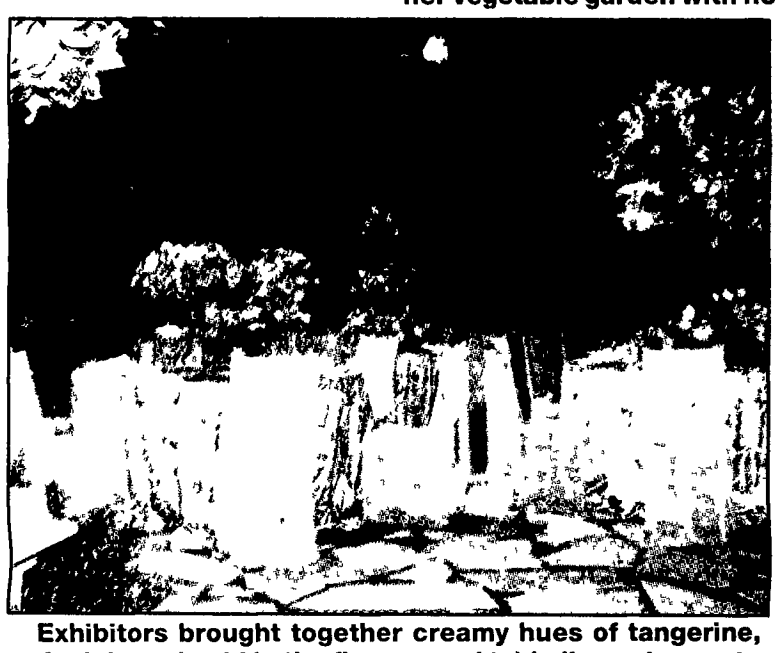
However the two-story gate — flanked by massive, flower-filled urns and topped with an arrangement in full bloom — did indeed lead into this year's Philadelphia Flower Show.

As the largest annual indoor flower show in the world and America's oldest flower show, this event brings out the finest in the horticultural world each year.

Garden paths, woodland scenes, whimsical table settings, even a vegetable garden display treated visitors to a floral variety at the weeklong show, which ran until earlier this week at the Philadelphia Convention Center.

The winsome flower displays inspired many to take home their own blooms or garden-related items. Here Maria Kunjappu, Langhorne, debates whether or not to fill her vegetable garden with flowers this year.

This display was recreated a 1927 wedding anniversary of a couple, working in Egypt, who hosted an outdoor celebration.



Exhibitors brought together creamy hues of tangerine, soft pink, and gold in the flowers and table linens to create this inviting garden scene. The display won best of show honors for "Creation of Romantic Floral Setting" by "Designs in Bloom," Philadelphia.

The theme, "Great Gardeners of the World," was repeated in the Chinese teahouse, Australian outback display, English Yew trees, tulip displays of Holland, and stark lines of the Japanese landscape at the show.

Judging and awards are also a part of the event. More than 200 judges come from across the nation to judge the exhibits of not only plants but also bonsai displays, an art show, and flowers framed or in pottery. This year the show hosted more than 2,000 entries in 580 classes in the amateur division.

More than 300 horticultural experts presented hundreds of tips for home gardeners during the show's lectures and demonstrations.

> "In the garden every man may be his own artist without apology or explanation; here is one spot where each may experience the romance of possibility."
> Louise Beebe Wilder

Before The Show

A titanic behind-the-scenes effort is necessary for each show, according to Glen Blandy, assistant designer for Stoney Bank Nurseries, Glen Mills. The company has exhibited for 22 years.

The design for next year's show must be submitted a month afer the show closes, "to make sure the gardeners go along with the theme," said Blandy, "so there are not 10 Japanese gardens next year."

In November the perennials are placed in refrigerated units to give the necessary dormancy of three months of winter. This ensures that the buds will flower at their peak during the show.

Nursery workers place the plants in greenhouses the first week in December. The plants are treated to an early springtime with extended day length courtesy of 1,000-watt lights and heated water. Trees, which lay on their side, are rotated every week for even leaf growth.

The combination of heating, employee hours, and fertilizer add up to a substantial bill, said Blandy.

"It's a long-term investment. Most of the people who come to the show are not going to make a snap decision, but they come back year after year. We get calls from people saying that they've seen our work for the past five years and want us to do work for them."

Competition is top-notch among the exhibitors. Judges compare the exhibitors' letters of intent describing their display, plus view a videotape during deliberations, according to Blandy.

Exhibitors have one week to set up their displays, which translates to 19 people working 70-80 hours to finish the project, he said.

Holland bulbs also made their way to the show.

Taking Tips Home

The event was not only horticultural but also educational. Business was brisk a booth hosted by Penn State cooperative extension to answer questions. "I haven't had any spare time since opening," said Philadelphia extension program aide Joseph Janulewicz. "We keep putting literature out also."

Although the questions

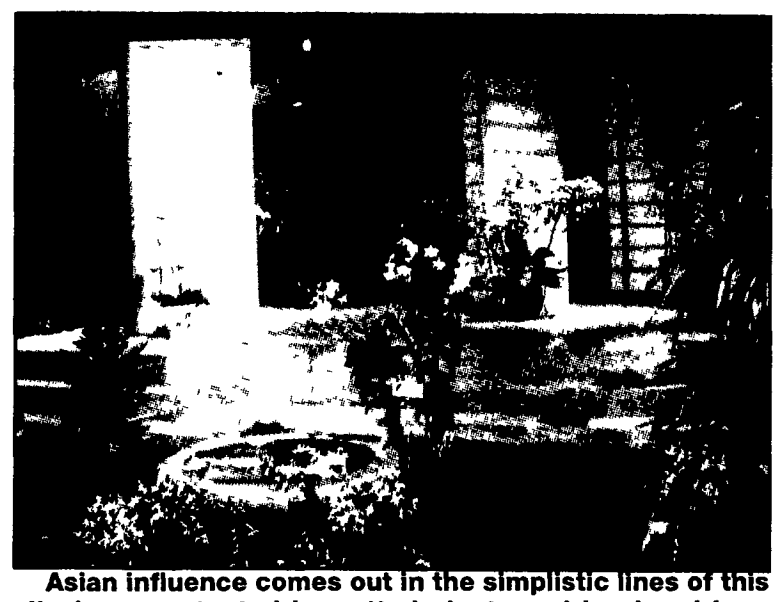
This imaginative, playful scene gave visitors a taste of the tropics.

As part of the "Great Gardeners of the World" theme, this Egyptian entrance exhibit paid tribute to the first Western gardeners in the valleys of the Euphrates. Irrigation from the Nile watered the walled-in decorative gardens. Hand paintings provide documentation of the creation of these gardens.



Asian influence comes out in the simplistic lines of this display, punctuated by potted plants and bordered by a small, gurgling creek.

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Imagine.

Imagine a spring without our farms and rural countryside.

Imagine no rolling landscapes gently turning from dead brown to vibrant green as the sun pokes up earlier each morning. No contoured fields striping the hillsides with awakening crops of wheat and barley next to the rich dark shades of damp soil ready for planting.

Imagine no stately willows keeping watch along ponds and streams, taking on a golden hue as their sap slowly rises. No acres of neat orchards, reddish-tinted bark hinting at their promise of sweet scented blossoms of apple and peach and cherry. No expanses of alfalfa where deer graze at dawn and dusk, where rabbits sneak out from fencerows to nibble lush forage, where foxes pounce, brushy tails waving, on field mouse prey. No pastures where pudgy groundhogs glory in seeing their shadows while gorging on tender new blades of grass.

Imagine no meandering little streams where kids can toss stones and catch pale green frogs and turn rocks over in search for mysterious creatures of the not-so-deep. Where wild daffodils push open early blooms of sunshine yellow and the scent of peppermint meadow tea lingers.

Imagine, instead, a spring where the emerging grass has to struggle up among pavement and concrete and highways. Where the blossoming trees are just ornamentals, tucked here and there in tiny islands of soil demarking the travel lanes and lined parking spots of office buildings and strip shopping spots.

Imagine a spring where the landscape blooms only with the sprawl of population, with endless blocks of fast food restaurants and giant sprawling retail centers. Where the cooling shade of trees has been replaced by traffic lights and street lights and directional signposts and advertising billboards. Where the only fresh blooming flowers eek out their living in concrete planters and landscaping accents lean toward piles of tossed cigarette butts, pitched plastic soft drink containers, and discarded paper trash.

Gee, not too hard to imagine some of that, is it?

In fact, all you have to do is take a quick drive to our many ever-creeping-outward urban and suburban areas for imagination to morph to sobering reality. With our York area now the eighth-fastest-growing county in the state, we precariously balance on that shaky line between "having it all" in terms of growth and development — and losing it all in terms of productive open space.

We are blessed in this area with lots of folks who still prize the beauty of rural nature, where private homes boast lovely plants and aprons of trimmed lawn, where backyard gardens are much more of a rule than a rarity.

We are blessed with lots of folks who want to be able to enjoy not only spring, but summer, autumn and winter as well, in close proximity to picturesque and productive rolling open fields and pastures. We are blessed with lots of folks who understand and prize the treasure of local farmland growing everything from apples to eggs, milk to potatoes, corn and wheat and soybeans, strawberries and peaches, tomatoes, squash.

We are blessed with lots of folks who, when polled recently, support forking over a few more of their own hard-earned bucks each year to help fund millions of dollars of bonds to keep farmland in farmland, to ensure that spring brings places for birds and butterflies and frogs and fishes.

Farmland preservation, to ensure that spring really is spring, with all its promise of another year of food production, is happening. It's just not happening fast enough. And, so, each spring, we have less acres than the year before.

Decades ago, Rachel Carson penned her book, "Silent Spring," which focused on the endangerment of species — especially large predator birds whose eggs were increasingly thin-shelled and cracking — due to "progress" and the use of heavy pesticides like DDT. As a society, we tackled that crisis, a victory celebrated with each eagle, each osprey, each red-tailed hawk soaring over cleaner skies, rivers, expanded wetlands.

Can we do any less to insure that the next "silent spring" isn't from the loss — forever — of our local productive farmland?

Secondhand Smoke Can Hurt The Ones You Love

You light up a cigarette and you say to yourself, "It's my business if I want to smoke. I am not hurting anyone else." Wrong!! If you are a parent, grandparent, or caregiver and are smoking in the house or car when children are present, you are putting those children at a greater risk for many health problems as you exhale that secondhand smoke.

Secondhand smoke is the smoke exhaled by a smoker and the smoke which emanates from the burning end of a cigarette, cigar or pipe. The Environmental Protection Agency and the Centers for Disease Control have listed secondhand smoke as a dangerous substance that can cause disease, including respiratory illness and cancer in humans.

Did you realize that a cigarette contains over 4,000 chemicals including benzene, arsenic, cyanide carbon monoxide and tar? And, these chemicals are dispersed into the air as a smoker exhales. In fact, when a person smokes indoors, the poisons in secondhand smoke stay in the air for 48 hours.

Parents should be aware that children who breathe secondhand smoke are more likely to suffer from pneumonia, bronchitis and other lung diseases; are most likely to suffer from ear infections and are hospitalized more often because of them; are more likely to develop asthma and have more asthma attacks; and are more likely to be hospitalized for respiratory infections.

Infants born to mothers who smoke are three times more likely to die from Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS) if the mother smoked during pregnancy. Also, infants born to nonsmoking mothers but are exposed to other smokers in the home are at higher risk of dying of SIDS than newborns in a non-smoking home.

If you are a smoker and a parent, you can make three choices for your child's health:

1. If you or others smoke, choose only to smoke outside a car. Give your baby a chance to breathe clean air.

2. If you smoke, choose not to smoke inside your home. Make your child's home environment safe and pollution free.

3. Choose to ask everyone not to smoke around your children. Use babysitters and child care providers who will honor your request.

Not everyone will choose to stop smoking right now, but every smoker can choose not to smoke and to ask others not to smoke around children.

For more on the subject of secondhand smoke and children, write for a free pamphlet entitled "Secondhand Smoke and Children" (send a self-addressed envelope) to American Academy of Otolaryngology-Head and Neck Surgery, Inc. One Prince Street, Alexandria, VA 22314.

If you are a smoker and have tried to stop, you know it isn't easy. Few communities have free and accessible smoking cessation programs. But, hopefully, as Pennsylvania's tobacco settlement money issues get worked out in Harrisburg, local hospitals and agencies should be implementing cessation programs.

Your local PA Department of Health should be able to help you find a smoking cessation class. April 2 is "Kick Butts" Day. Why not kick some cigarette butts for your child's health and your health too??

Last year Indiana County Cooperative Extension, working with the Indiana County Tobacco Free Committee, received a grant from the Pennsylvania Tobacco Prevention Network. One of the many projects was a special presentation of 400 "Keep Me a Smoke Free Baby" infant T-shirts and secondhand smoke literature to maternity centers at Indiana Hospital and Punxsutawney Hospital in Jefferson County.

Currently, the extension office is working on another grant from PTPN entitled "Enjoyed the Meal But Not the Smoke-Smoke Free Dining Project" in which teen volunteers are conducting a survey to determine the number of 100 percent smoke free restaurants.

Restaurants not smoke free are being given information on why it is good business to go smoke free. In addition, restaurant goers are being asked to encourage their favorite restaurant to go smoke free so that everyone can enjoy their good food and breathe clean air, too.

Corned Beef & Orange-Glazed Vegetables and Dilled Cabbage

Celebrate ST. PAT'S DAY With a Taste o' the Irish

Americans love to celebrate St. Patrick's Day whether they're Irish or not—because, actually, we're all a little Irish on St. Patty's Day! We wear green, or at least pin on a shamrock for good luck, and we look forward to favorite food traditions.

Corned Beef & Orange-Glazed Vegetables accompanied by Dilled Cabbage will make any leprechaun think he has found the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. The corned beef is easy to prepare, needing no attention as it simmers to fork-tenderness. While it cooks, you'll have ample time to prepare the vegetables and the delicious orange glaze.

For some, a savory serving of Beef & Winter Vegetable Stew is more to their liking. Chunks of potatoes, carrots and onions complement the beef as it simmers.

To easily complete the meal, purchase potato rolls or Irish soda bread from the bakery. And while you're there, pick up some shamrock-shaped cookies or other St. Pat's inspired dessert.

If the luck of the Irish is with you and you have leftovers, use the corned beef to make Corned Beef, Potato & Pepper Hash or a classic Reuben Sandwich. For lunch at the office, simply reheat the stew in a microwave oven.

Corned Beef & Orange-Glazed Vegetables

Total preparation & cooking time: 3-1/4 hours to 3-3/4 hours

- 1 boneless corned beef brisket (about 3-1/2 pounds)
- 1/3 cup fresh orange juice
- 1/4 cup packed brown sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon cornstarch
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 teaspoon grated orange peel
- 1 pound carrots, cut diagonally into 1/2-inch pieces
- 1 medium onion, cut into 8 wedges

1. Place brisket in Dutch oven. Add enough water to cover brisket. Bring to a boil; reduce heat to low. Cover tightly and simmer 3 to 3-1/2 hours or until tender.
2. Meanwhile combine orange juice, brown sugar and cornstarch in small saucepan. Bring to a boil; cook 2 minutes or until thickened, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat; stir in butter and orange peel.
3. Cook carrots in boiling water in medium saucepan, uncovered, 10 minutes. Add onion and continue cooking 5 minutes or until vegetables are just tender. Drain; return to saucepan and set aside.
4. Remove brisket from cooking liquid; trim excess fat. Place brisket, fat side up, on rack in broiler pan so surface of meat is 3 to 4 inches from heat. Brush 2 tablespoons of the orange mixture over top of brisket; broil 3 minutes or until brisket is glazed. Pour remaining orange mixture over reserved vegetables; cook, uncovered, over medium-high heat 1 to 2 minutes or until vegetables are glazed.
5. Carve brisket diagonally across the grain into thin slices and serve with vegetables.

Makes 8 servings.

Dilled Cabbage

Cut 1 medium cabbage into 8 wedges; steam 15 to 20 minutes or until tender. Combine 3 tablespoons softened butter, 1 tablespoon Dijon-style mustard and 1-1/2 teaspoons chopped fresh dill (or 1/2 teaspoon dill weed). Spread over hot cabbage wedges.

Tips to Perfection– NO BLARNEY!

The secret to perfect corned beef brisket or beef stew is to simmer gently in a tightly covered pan until the beef is fork-tender. The steam created in the pan helps ensure moist, tender beef. Boiling won't speed the cooking; it only results in tough, dry beef.

- Stovetop Method: Place corned beef brisket in a large pan such as a Dutch oven; add enough water to cover the brisket. Cover tightly and simmer over low heat until fork-tender.
- Oven Method: Place corned beef brisket in roasting pan; add 2 cups of water. Cover tightly with heavy-duty aluminum foil; cook in 325°F oven until fork-tender.
- To cook the stew, brown the beef to add color and rich flavor. For best results, first pat beef pieces dry with paper towels. Then brown the beef slowly in batches. Return all beef to pan and add just enough liquid to cover the ingredients.

Beef & Winter Vegetable Stew

Corned Beef, Potato & Pepper Hash

Total preparation & cooking time: 50 minutes

- 12 ounces cooked corned beef, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
- 1 pound baking potatoes, peeled, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 medium onion, coarsely chopped
- 1 chopped red, yellow or green bell pepper
- 1/4 cup whole milk or half-and-half
- 3 tablespoons chopped parsley
- 3 tablespoons dry white wine
- 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1 tablespoon butter
- Salt and pepper, as desired

1. Bring water to a boil in large saucepan; add potatoes and salt. Return to a boil and cook 5 minutes; drain well.
2. Melt 1 tablespoon butter in large nonstick skillet over medium-high heat; add onion and bell pepper. Cook 2 minutes or until crisp-tender, stirring occasionally; remove to large bowl. Add beef, potatoes, milk and parsley to onion mixture; mix lightly. Combine wine and mustard; add to beef mixture and mix well.
3. Wipe out skillet with paper towel; heat over medium heat until hot. Add remaining butter. Add beef mixture, pressing down firmly. Cook 15 minutes or until browned, turning with flat spatula several times. Season hash with salt and pepper to taste.

Makes 4 servings.

Reuben Sandwiches

Total preparation & cooking time: 30 minutes

- 12 ounces thinly sliced cooked corned beef
- 4 teaspoons butter, softened

IRISH SODA BREAD

In heavy-duty bread mixer, add the following in order given:
2 cups buttermilk
¼ cup butter
4 cups flour
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon baking soda
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt

Mix until well blended. Add one cup raisins or currants. Mix until incorporated. This dough is sticky. Place in 9-inch round or square cake pan that is well greased. Slit across top in both directions (this is not necessary, but strictly for decorative look). Place in preheated 350 degree oven for one hour. Test after one hour with toothpick. If toothpick, comes out clean, remove from oven, otherwise continue baking at 10-minute intervals. Cool in pan for 10 minutes and then on rack. When cool, place in plastic bag until ready to eat.

I have been making this Irish soda bread fro the past 25 years on St. Paddy's Day. The bread stays moist for days if there is any left.

ST. PATRICK'S BRUSSELS SALAD

Before adding brussels sprouts to salads, wilt the sprouts by pouring boiling water over them, drain. This brings out the flavor and brightens the color. Tiny brussels sprouts are delicious in green salads and coleslaw or combine parboiled brussels sprouts, cherry tomatoes, and black olives in a vinaigrette dressing.

Blame Moisture For Caked Garlic Powder

A common problem is this one voiced by a homemaker, "I keep my spices in a cupboard above my stove. I have been having trouble with the garlic and onion powder getting hard. I've tried leaving them on the counter, but they do the same thing. Someone told me to put navy beans in the jars, but this didn't work. I would appreciate any help you could give me."

The powders get hard because of too much moisture. Somehow, humidity is getting trapped in the jar and causing the powders to harden. Unfortunately, according to a website sponsored by seven spice companies (http://www.spiceguide.com), this is a common problem for garlic and onion powder.

Extension nutritionists at Ohio State University suggest a number of ideas to try:

- Store these products away from moisture. Over the stove probably isn't the best choice because the air gets moist there almost anytime cook. Other storage areas to avoid are near the dishwasher and sink.
- Make sure you use clean, dry spoons for measuring. Moisture from a rinsed-off measuring spoon can easily become trapped in the jar after you reseal it.
- As long as your hardened garlic and onion powders retain an aroma, they're still fresh enough to use. Try breaking up the clump with a knife or a blender.
- Find some airtight containers to store a small amount of garlic and onion powders for you to use on a daily basis, keeping the bulk of the powders in their original containers. That way, the original containers won't be opened nearly as often, preventing moisture from becoming a problem. You should be able to use the smaller amounts before the powders become too hard.
- Try storing the powders in the refrigerator or freezer. The air inside might very well be drier than the air in your kitchen.
- You might want to try putting a packet of desiccant, often included in bottles of vitamins, pain relievers and other products, in the jar. Most desiccants, such as silica gel, are not hazardous and do a great job of absorbing moisture.

ANSWER — Mary Brinton, Severn, Md., requested a recipe for President Grant's rice pudding. Although we did not receive that recipe, a reader sent a recipe for rice pudding that President Eisenhower enjoyed.

English Rice Pudding

3 cups milk
½ cup rice
½ teaspoon lemon rind, finely grated
3 egg yolks
½ cup sugar
raisins

Cook the rice in the milk ading the lemon rind so that the rice is lightly flavored. After rice is coooked, combine it unstrained with the egg yolks and sugar, adding a very generous quantity of raisins; pour the mixture into a 2-quart or a 8x8-inch baking dish. Bake 35 minutes at 300 degrees; at this low temperature you don't have to set in in a pan of water. Just before removing it from the oven, cover the top quite heavily with powdered sugar and place it under the broiler for a few minutes to caramelize. Be careful not to let it burn. Serve with a pitcher of cream.

ANSWER — Here are some more recipes in answer to the request for chicken breast recipes. Thanks to Mrs. Aaron Huber, Myerstown, for sending several recipes.

Crispy Chicken Rollups

3 whole boneless chicken breasts, halved, pounded
6 slices cooked ham
6 slices Swiss cheese
2 eggs, beaten
2 cups Team or rice crispy cereal, crushed
2 tablespoons butter

Top each chicken breast with one slice ham and one slice cheese. Roll up, secure with toothpicks. Dip in egg and roll in cereal crumbs. Place in greased baking dish. Drizzle with butter. Bake at 350 degrees for 40 minutes, uncovered.

Creamy Chicken Bake

4-6 boneless chicken breasts
6 slices white American cheese
1 can cream of chicken soup
¼ cup milk
1¼ cups instant stove-top stuffing mix
¼ cup butter, melted

Place chicken in 13x9-inch pan; place cheese on each piece. Combine soup and milk; pour over chicken. combine stuffing mix and butter. Sprinkle over soup mixture. Bake, uncovered, 350 degrees for 50 minutes.

Chicken Breasts

Pound chicken breast until ¼-inch thick. Roll in eggs and cracker crumbs. Fry in butter for 10-15 minutes, turning once.

Very good and soft if not overdone.

Homemade Ice Cream Sandwiches

½ cup margarine
1 cup brown sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
½ cup cocoa powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ gallon vanilla ice cream

In a medium-size bowl, cream margarine and brown sugar (use margarine, not butter and brown sugar instead of granulated sugar for a chewy, soft cookie. Beat in eggs, one at a time, then the vanilla extract.

In a separate bowl, stir the cocoa, flour, baking powder, and salt. Gradually add to the margarine mixture. Beat until well combined. Gather the dough into a ball and chill at least one hour.

Heat the oven to 375 degrees. On a lightly floured surface, roll out the dough to ¼-inch thickness. Use a ruler and sharp knife to cut out 2¼x5-inch reactangular pieces.

Transfer the cookie rectangles with a spatula to an ungreased baking pan. Use the tines of a fork to make patterns on the cookies. Bake the cookies for 8-10 minutes or until set. Cool on cooling rack.

Meanwhile, cut rectangular blocks from the ice cream. To do this, peel back the half gallon carton from the ice cream, and cut into ½-inch thick slabs that are roughly the dimensions of your baked cookies. Return the blocks to the freezer. Once the cookies are thoroughly cooled, place one ice cream block between two cookies. Trim the sides with a knife, wrap the sandwich in foil, and freeze for several hours. Repeat until you have used all the cookies and ice cream.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

We've had more snow but not as much as was predicted. Now the sun is shining and will melt most of it. As long as I do not need to drive the car on icy roads, I'm satisfied to have winter a while longer.

You see, I want to make another braided rug. Two weeks ago, I started to rip wool skirts and trousers. Then I tore strips and now I'm basting the material. But, still no rug is started. It should be finished before pea planting time.

This time the rug won't be red and blue or green and tan, but rather a rainbow of colors as I only have bits and pieces of various colors. The six oldest grandchildren already have had their choice of a rug. But, there are nine more approaching 12 years of age when they too can choose one.

Recently, I had the pleasure of meeting some long time Lancaster Farming subscribers who live in Malvern. This couple is documenting patterned linen. Upon close inspection, blue and white linen is not exactly alike. There are small differences in the size of the squares. They have a large collection of information and if the background of the linen is known that is very important to them.

Do you ever get disgusted when using the telephone to find that there are nine different buttons to push if you want a certain person? Then after getting the person's office, you are told to leave a message on their "voice mail." Our rotary phone is in the kitchen and is most convenient to use. But often we must go to the bedroom for a push button phone.

The other day I phoned a bank and an honest to goodness live person actually answered the phone. It was a real pleasure to deal with a human being.

Radon In The Home: Myths, Realities

To register, call (610) 696-3500 by March 12. The meeting is open to all people without regard to race, color, national origin, sex, handicap or age.

Moisture Problems In The Home

To learn about causes and a range of possible techniques to eliminate home moisture problems, attend the "Moisture Problems in the Home."

The program will be held on Tuesday, April 17, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Penn State cooperative extension office, West Chester. To register, call (610) 686-3500 by April 10.

Tightening our homes through the use of window and door sealers, weather stripping and other energy conserving measures will considerably reduce the amount of energy required for heating and cooling.

But these practices also reduce natural ventilation to the point that moisture generated by typical everyday activities such as cooking, bating, and even breathing presents a problem.

Condensation on interior windows, wood decay and growth of mold and mildew on walls or ceilings are sure signs of excessive moisture. Because excess moisture can cause hidden problems as well, a clear understanding of why problems occur is an important first step towards a successful solution.

Stream Maps

of Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Michigan and New England (CT, MA, VT, NH, RI)

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor

The map is also known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible...a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand, the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 x 5 foot map.

The map sold extremely well -- until it was lost several years later. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill.

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Holding an updated map, Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

Why every fisherman needs these maps

It is estimated that 10% of all the fishermen catch 90% of the fish. Regardless of which group you fall into... there's a sure way to up your odds... simply try new fishing waters. Fish where few fishermen ever fish.

Professor Higbee's Stream Maps are the first and only highly detailed maps of their kind... showing virtually all of the streams, rivers and lakes in each state.

Mother Ewe Delivers Four Fuzzy Sons

Joyce Bupp
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Babies started turning up in all corners of the lambing pen when a ewe owned by the Stewart Ebersole family began giving birth a few weeks ago.

In less than an hour after the first little ram arrived in the little flock on Springwood Road, he had three more brothers, all covered with black-tinted tight curls and looking identical to one another.

"This is pretty rare for a Hampshire," noted Steve Ebersole, son of the owner, who lent only a little bit of help to the 7-year-old ewe as she delivered the quadruplet infants. The ewe was the last of the family's five Hampshires to lamb this season, contributing a third of the farm's total dozen additions for the spring. That group already included a set of triplets born earlier to another of the farm's ewe mothers.

Grandchildren of shepherd Stewart Ebersole gathered to admire and cuddle the four fuzzy newborns in the barn at Stewarts Hampshires. From left are Gary Taughinbaugh, 12, Justin Keller, 4, Kayla Blymire, 9 and Austin Keller, 6.

The Ebersoles estimated that each of the ram lambs weighed 7-8 pounds and were being well-fed by their busy mother. Steve Ebersole repeatedly offered bottles of milk to the lambs, in case they were hungry, but none showed any interest in the supplemental milk. With so many extra little mouths for her to feed, he planned to keep the mother ewe well supplied with extra feed and hay during the two-month period the lambs are expected to continue nursing.

Especially excited by the addition of the lambs were the Ebersole's four great-grandchildren who enjoyed visiting the patient mother ewe and cuddling the babies for brief periods of time. Gary Taughinbaugh, 12, and Kayla Blymire, 9, are the children of Mindy and Paul Blymire, Felton, and attend fifth and third grades at Chanceford Elementary School. While they enjoy visiting the lambs, both are also horse enthusiasts and members of the 4-H horse programs.

Brothers Austin, 6, and Justin, 4, Keller were also eager to visit and snuggle the newborns. They are the children of Terry and Monica Keller, Lower Windsor township. Austin is in kindergarten at Canadochly Elementary School and Justin attends Trinity Church preschool at Hellam.

"We have had over one thousand lambs born here on the farm over the years, but this is the first time we have ever had quads," said the delighted Stewart Ebersole, who still enjoys tending the small flock in his retirement. He got his first sheep in 1955, and the flock grew to as large at 100 head at one time. The Ebersole family exhibited open and 4-H sheep for many years at area fairs and Hampshire breed shows.

Friendly but cautious, this mother ewe watches over her 3-day-old quadruplet lambs, all little rams.

Auction To Benefit Toddler Burned In Hot Water

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — An Amish toddler fell into a vat of boiling water, which her father was using to prepare calf feed.

The 21-month-old daughter of Lena and Thomas Swarey, Belleville, suffered third-degree burns over almost 100 percent of her body in the Feb. 9 accident.

The toddler was hospitalized at St. Christopher's Hospital, Philadelphia, amassing $254,000 in medical bills, before she was moved to the free Shriner's Hospital in Cincinnati, Ohio.

The St. Christopher's bill will be discounted to $111,800 if paid by April 22.

The Amish community cannot shoulder the cost on its own. Friends in Mifflin County have organized a auction to be conducted in Allensville on March 24. Donations of hay, livestock, housegoods, and other appropriate items are being accepted. For more information, call Mark Glick (717) 667-3795 or drop off items at Willy B. Swarey, 3245 East Stack Mountain Rd., Allensville.

Cards and monetary donations can be sent to Leah through the address of St. John's Lutheran Church, P.O. Box 5716, Belleville, PA 17004.

Michelle Long, who helped organize a fund raiser said that it is extremely rare for a person to survive burns covering more than 80 percent of the body. Leah is expected to be hospitalized an additional two months with skin grafting beginning March 22. As the skin stretches, regrafting will be required on certain sections of Leah's body.

"She is growing back some hair, which is a good sign, and some natural skin is starting to bud," Long said. "Leah is smiling, laughing, and acting like a typical two-year-old, although pain medication is continuing," Long said.

Can pigs eat potato chips?
They sure can—and they don't care whether they're plain, barbecue or sour cream and onion flavored!
Pigs, like all animals, need an energy source in their food. Corn is usually fed to pigs to meet this need, but it's expensive. A couple of scientists at The Ohio State University put their thinking caps on and decided to feed potato chip scraps (the burnt, broken or bits and pieces) to pigs instead of corn. The result? Potato chip scraps were cheaper than corn and they gave pigs more energy. In one study, the scientists fed chips to nursery pigs. The chips helped them grow quickly and reach the finishing stage—maturity—much faster. The chips also promoted "feed efficiency." In other words, the young pigs were given a balanced diet and they always cleaned their plates—saving farmers money. Imagine being a piglet. You could eat potato chips all day long and have lots of energy to play and grow!
You can't buy chip-fed pork in the store. This was just an experiment. And remember—being a scientist can be creative and lots of fun. Who knows what they'll think of next!
Scientifically yours, Twig

Virginia Crowns Dairy Princess

ROANOKE, Va. — "A dairy princess needs to excel in speaking ability, knowledge of the dairy industry, personality, poise and appearance. To be a dairy princess, you need to have an understanding of the issues the dairy farmers of Virginia are facing today. Furthermore, she needs to have an understanding of what the dairy consumers need and want."

These words were part of an essay that Jennifer Leech of Lexington, Va. wrote as a portion of her competition for the title of dairy princess at the Virginia Dairyman's Convention in Roanoke in January.

Jennifer is a junior at Rockbridge County High School and daughter of Charlie and Linda Leech of Lexington, Va.

Jennifer was raised on her family's dairy farm in Rockbridge County, Va. Her responsibilities at the dairy include feeding the dry cows, assisting with milking, and helping their trout operation on the farm.

Jennifer is active in the 4-H Stockman's Club and has participated in the junior dairyman's competition at Richmond and in 4-H Dairy Bowl. Jennifer served as a Virginia dairy maid in 2000, promoting Virginia's dairy industry.

The other contestants included Rene Lindsay Sine of Woodstock and Meg Louisa Welsh of Keezletown. They will all serve as a royal court, promoting the dairy industry throughout the tri-state area.

Meg, daughter of Pam and John Welsh, was crowned runner-up. She is a sophomore at Blue Ridge Community College.

Meg received many academic and leadership awards in high school. She was a member of the 2000 4-H State dairy judging team and was very active in FFA, having served as president of her chapter at Spotswood High School.

Rene, daughter of Nelson and Beverly Sine of Woodstock, was crowned Dairy Duchess. She is president of the County 4-H Exchange Program and 4-H County Council. She was a member of the 1999 4-H dairy judging team competing in Louisville. Rene served as Virginia Dairy Duchess in 2000 and has been accepted at Virginia Intermont College.

The pageant's master of ceremonies was Austin Lineberry, state FFA vice president from Fries, Va. Austin is a sophomore at Virginia Tech, a member of many honorary societies, and the Beta Eta chapter of Alpha Gamma Rho. The esteemed judging panel included Helen Smith of Hot Springs, Va.; Dr. David Winston, professor and 4-H dairy specialist from Va. Tech; and Jana Edwards, a senior at Va. Tech and former Maryland Dairy Princess.

The competition consists of four parts, which include industry knowledge, speaking ability, appearance, and poise and personality. The young ladies prepare a 30-second radio spot and a 5-10 minute skit. The prize-winning skit was performed by Meg in front of the banquet, which followed the pageant.

While the contestants were preparing for their final question, Laura Robinson, 2000 Virginia Dairy Princess, gave her farewell speech and thanked the many organizations and individuals who had supported her during her reign. Laura spoke about the theme of the convention, "Taking care of it all...yourself...family...the farm." She saluted the dairy farmers and concluded that no one works so hard and, "that if everyone had the work ethic of the dairy farmer, we would have no economic problems today. The dairy farmer does it all."

As Laura finished her speech, 10 new dairy maids were crowned. They include Kathryn Liskey, Rosemary Liskey, Veronica Paulsen, Ashley Shifflet, Billie Jo Swope, Gina Weblster, Charlotte Will, Jennifer Will, Joanie Will, and Kristen Windle.

Region Searches For Dairy Princesses And Dairy Maids

FREELAND, Md. — The Upper Chesapeake Dairy Princess Committee is searching for contestants for its annual pageant, to be held on May 11. The Upper Chesapeake region covers Baltimore, Harford, and Cecil county.

Regional princesses participate in a training seminar in early July and will compete in the state pageant in late July in Frederick.

To enter the regional contest, candidates may be the daughter of one of the following: a dairy farmer, a dairy farm manager or herdsman or someone employed in a dairy-related industry (farm store, dairy cooperative, DHIA supervisor, feed supplier, veterinarian, milk inspector, etc.).

Candidates may also be employed herself as one of the above or be the owner of at least one dairy animal or enrolled in the dairy foods project in 4-H or FFA.

Contestants must be 16-years-old as of the contest year and may not reach her 22nd birthday by Dec. 31 of the contest year.

Young ladies between 13- and 16-years-old can participate in the royalty program as dairy maids.

For more information on becoming a dairy princess or dairy maid, and to request an application, contact Patricia and Sarah Bedgar, P.O. Box 66, Freeland, MD 21053, (410) 357-4296 or (301) 314-5246.

Farm-Related Antiques Interest Veterinarian

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — A veterinarian living on Haymaker Drive might feel obligated to collect only one kind of antiques — those related to the farm. But Dr. Morrow of State College, Centre County, enjoys all kinds of antiques. Many just happen to be farm related.

> "You've heard the expression 'We'll be there with bells on.' If a trip in the wagon was uneventful, people arrived with their bells on. If they broke down, they gave up their bells to thank the person who stopped to help."
> Dr. Morrow
> Sleigh bell collector

"I collect sleigh bells, milk bottles, and butter churns," Dr. Morrow begins.

While the smaller antiques placed tastefully throughout the home might be overlooked, one larger antique can't be missed — a beautifully refinished sleigh sitting just as tastefully at an angle in one corner of the spacious living room.

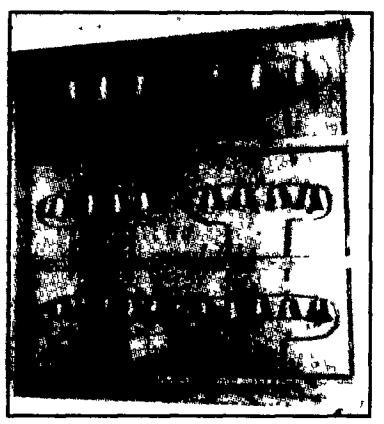
"My mother said that she remembered riding in it, and she was born in 1905. She said they had to be careful when the tracks in the road would freeze; it would upset the sleigh," Morrow recalled.

Just behind the sleigh stands a grandfather's clock that was built in 1791, its fraktur face faded after 200 years. Even though Dr. Morrow purchased the clock in Michigan, the previous owner was from eastern Pennsylvania.

Along another wall stands a heavy Dutch cupboard with a set of sleigh bells lying across the front — only one string of sleigh bells from the collection that Dr. Morrow keeps in the next room.

"These longer ones wrapped around the horses," Dr. Morrow explains, reaching for the full-length straps of bells hanging from ceiling to floor in one corner of the room. From a distance, each string looks the same.

A closer look, though, shows leather straps of various widths and bells of varying sizes, from the smallest on the ends to the largest bells in the center. Some are shiny decorated brass; others are numbered. The largest is stamped with No. 18. Dr. Morrow reaches for one set of bells in particular.



Dr. Morrow collects harness bells of many shapes and sizes. The brass bells laying across the front of this Dutch cupboard, built in the mid-1800s, were placed across the rump of the horse. The top photo shows Conestoga bells, which often decorated the "prairie schooners," built during the early 1800s.

"These are the bells my father gave me 25 years ago. They're from my home farm. When we lived in Michigan, I gathered a few more. Now I'm lucky to get one string of bells a year."

Dr. and Mrs. Morrow's commendable collection of Conestoga wagon bells are kept in a protective display case. Each of the six horses pulling the heavy wagons had bells attached to its harness.

"You've heard the expression 'We'll be there with bells on.' If a trip in the wagon was uneventful, people arrived with their bells on. If they broke down, they gave up their bells to thank the person who stopped to help."

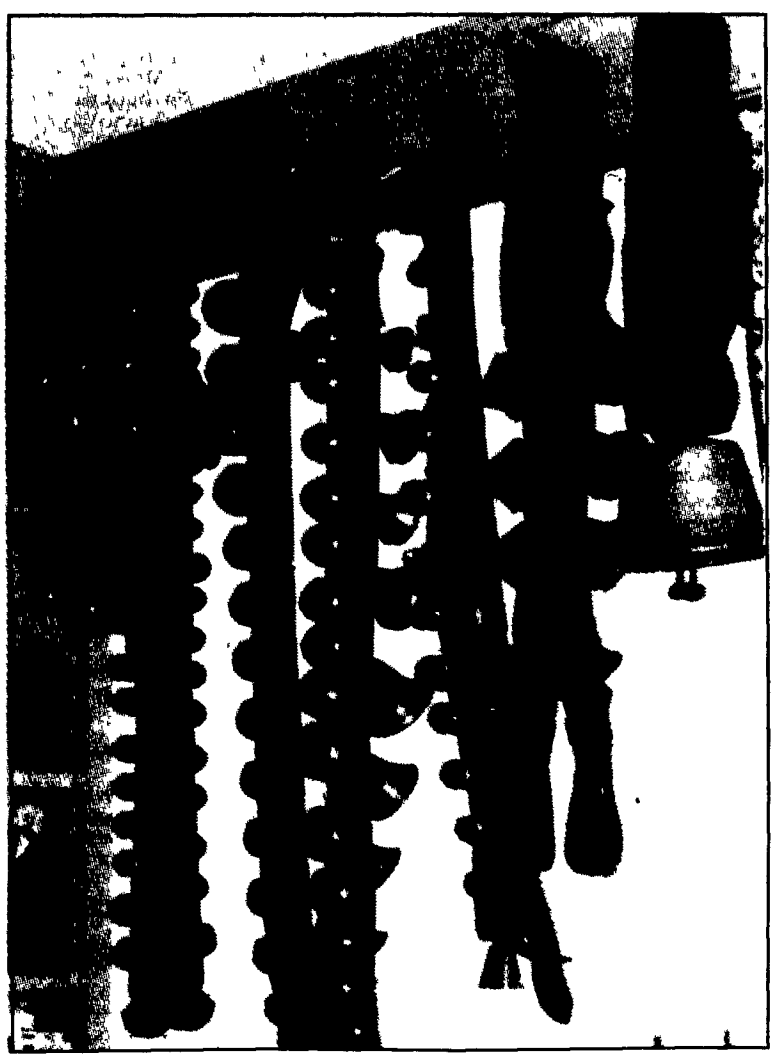
Dr. and Mrs. Morrow's collection of antiques includes four of the five butter churns made by Blanchard. One is labeled "The Lightening Churn, No. 0, made only by Porter Blanchards Sons & Co., Nashau, New Hampshire."

These butter churns were patented in 1878. Dr. Morrow's milk bottle collection includes bottles from Cornell, State College Creamery, Stricklers, Harshbargers, and Obit Snider from Bedford County.

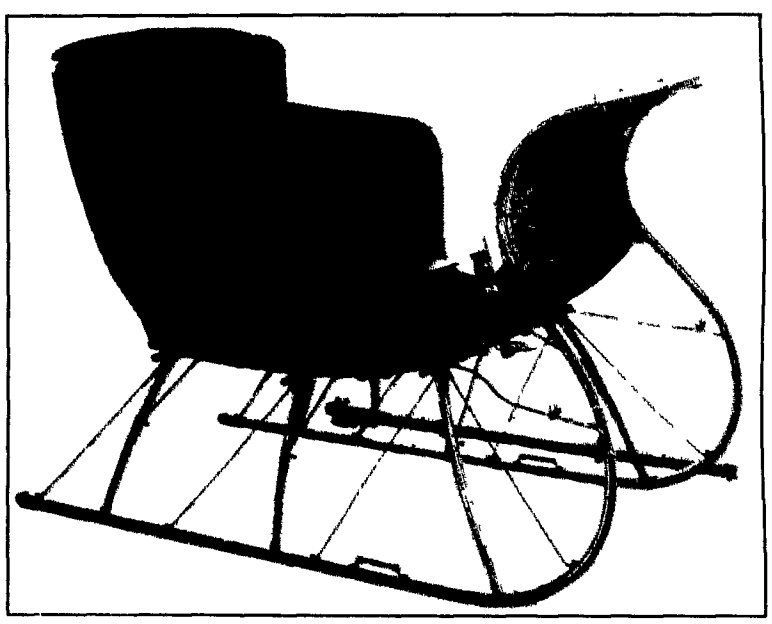
As Dr. Morrow points out other items of interest — dough trays, tavern tables, pewter plates, dry sinks, and hayforks — the family cat quietly passes by.

"There's something approaching antique," he says with easy humor. "Our cat is 15 years old."

Sleigh bells hang in loops in Dr. Morrow's home. The cow bell on the right is from Switzerland; a rack of Conestoga bells hangs in front. Long strips of leather hold various sizes of sleigh bells attached with a metal pin in the back.



Dr. Morrow said his mother remembers riding in this sleigh — and upsetting when the runners caught in ruts that froze in snow-covered roads.



Antique Question And Answer

I used to hear a lot about glass fruit jars. A few years ago everybody seemed to be collecting them. I have recently bought some and would like to know more. Is there a collectors club I could contact?

D.C. — Gary, Ind.

Try the Midwest Antique Fruit Jar and Bottle Club, P.O. Box 38, Flat Rock, IN 47234.

A child's silverplate fork and spoon have the words "Goosy, Gander" on the handles, with raised goose figures. They are marked Regal Silver Company. What can you tell me about them?

P.S.-Charlotte, N.C.

The Regal Silver Company was founded in 1910 in New Haven, Connecticut. The name was changed shortly after to Majestic Silver Company. Your pieces could be priced at $80 to $100.

I would like some history on my upright, oak "Larkin" desk. It has scrollwork in two places, on the leaf and top. I was told this was made in Grand Rapids, Michigan. How old is it?

M.J. B.-Cohasset, Mass.

Your Mission Oak style desk was made by the Larkin Furniture Company, Buffalo, New York from 1901 to around 1918. Similar pieces have sold at auction for $900 and up.

Royal Worcester Porcelain Styles Changed Over The Years

From the day the Worcester factory was opened in England in 1851 by Dr. John Wall and his partners to this day, its porcelains continues as one of the most popular and collected.

While most collectors are familiar with the early 18th century pieces and are willing to pay top dollar for them, less familiar are the 19th century pieces made beginning in 1862. In fact, as a recent Doyle New York auction proved, there are bargains to be had in the gilt-decorated Victorian porcelains. Modestly estimated to begin within the price range of groups at $600 to $800, the porcelains seemed to reflect how fashion sets the price. Contrasted with the 18th century pieces known as Dr. Wall, where a single cup and saucer can sell at auction for $1,000, the Victorian pieces, proved this was a buyers' market. Of course, age and rarity also make a difference.

After the death of Dr. Wall in 1776, the factory changed owners many times until in 1862 it became the Worcester Royal Porcelain Company Lt. (commonly known as "Royal Worcester.")

Clues: Collectors refer to the porcelain by the owners' names, example, Flight, Barr & Barr and Chamberlin & Co. The marks changed with the owners. Sometimes the pieces are marked with the owners' names or initials in many combinations.

While there are no reproductions of the Victorian Royal Worcester, there are many forged Worcester "Dr. Wall" period; many attributed to the Emile Samson factory in Paris, maker of many porcelain fakes.

For a brief period (1851-62), when the factory was owned by Kerr and Binns, quality and sales went on a downward spiral. In 1862, when the Royal Worcester Company was formed anew by Mr. Binns, the best potters, designers, and gilders were retained. The mark, four interlaced "W's' in a circle surrounding a small crescent and "51' was continued.

In 1889, Worcester bought Grainger Pottery, known for soft-paste porcelain and bone china. While their vases followed the Victorian shapes and style of the time, there were some differences. For example, George Grainger developed a technique that gave a lace-like effect to handles. He did this by soaking real lace in liquid china slip. When the lace burned away in a kiln, the result was a filigreed porcelain. He also used enamel and gilt paints. His pieces are often marked with an impressed G & C/ W within a shield.

The most expensive pieces of Royal Worcester are those that have scenes, floral, and fauna that can be attributed to a known artist or a gilders' mark. Desirable artists include members of the Stinton family, James Callowhill and Charles Fergus and the Davis family of gilders.

The Victorian vases, pitchers, and ewers so popular in the 19th century were produced in great quantity. The majority of these had simple floral motifs and gilt trim and were referred to as decorative or gift wares.

Worcester Cont'd

A totally different type of porcelain for dining was made by Royal Worcester, as well as by their competitors. It followed the Victorian taste and was overly ornate. The subjects ranged from landscapes, to portraits, armorial and floral motifs. The look of Japanese Imari is just as popular today as it was then. Worcester also made pierced wares and large porcelain plaques. Many of their pieces even copied the look of early French Sevres with their palatte of jewel colors.

Since all pieces of Royal Worcester are marked with date marks, invest in a book on English china that explains the date marks.

Group of 19th century Royal Worcester porcelain.

Potato Chips — Healthy, Cheap Feed That May Not Be Just For Pigs

WOOSTER, Ohio — Potato chips, the high-energy, inexpensive snack food that produced quick market weight gains in pigs, is now being introduced in the diet of chickens.

Sha Rahnema, an Ohio State University Agricultural Technical Institute researcher, will replace corn with potato chip scraps in chicken feed to determine the growth performance of growing broiler chicks. Rahnema and Ron Borton, another faculty member at ATI, recently completed a series of studies involving feeding potato chip scraps to pigs.

They found that by replacing 12.5 percent of corn feed with potato chips in the diet produced optimal dry matter intake, average daily weight gain and the number of days required for pigs to reach market weight. Rahnema is hoping to find the same results in chickens.

"The idea is to see if the potato chip scraps are as good if not better than corn as an alternative feed for chickens," said Rahnema. "It would be helpful for poultry producers to know that there is an alternative feed they can use in a chicken's diet."

The most common ingredients of chicken feed are soybeans and corn. Corn, which is used to provide the energy portion of an animal's diet, is relatively expensive. Potato chip scraps are also high in energy, having around 33 percent vegetable fat, but are cheaper than corn. Rahnema said that in areas around potato chip manufacturing plants, it would make sense to replace corn with a cheaper energy source if animal performance is not compromised.

The study with chicks will entail feeding diets containing 0, 10 percent, 15 percent, and 20 percent potato chip scraps for four to six weeks and measuring various aspects of growth during the experimental period. Researchers will also analyze the feed for a variety of components including crude protein, fat, ash and amino acids.

"Potato chip scraps are an economically viable, environmentally friendly and socially acceptable product to use," said Rahnema. "If animals get just as good if not better performance from potato chip scraps than corn, than why not use it?"

The study is expected to begin in late March.

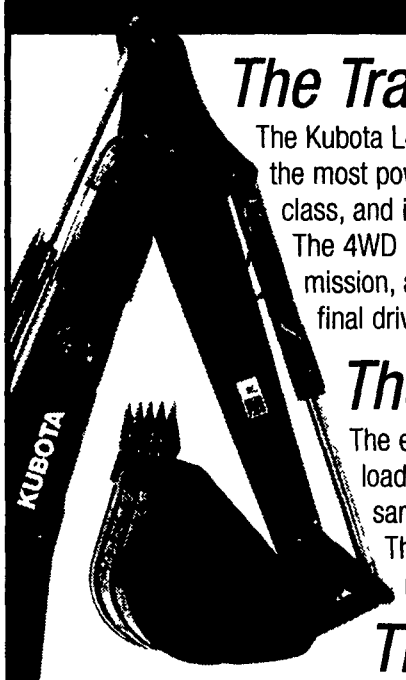
Kubota TLBs... Built to Move Anything



The Tractor

The Kubota L48 tractor/loader/backhoe from Hoober is the most powerful and versatile compact tractor in its class, and is designed to handle a multitude of jobs. The 4WD L48 features 48 HP, a hydrostatic transmission, and a heavy-duty rear axle with planetary final drives to handle heavy torque loads.

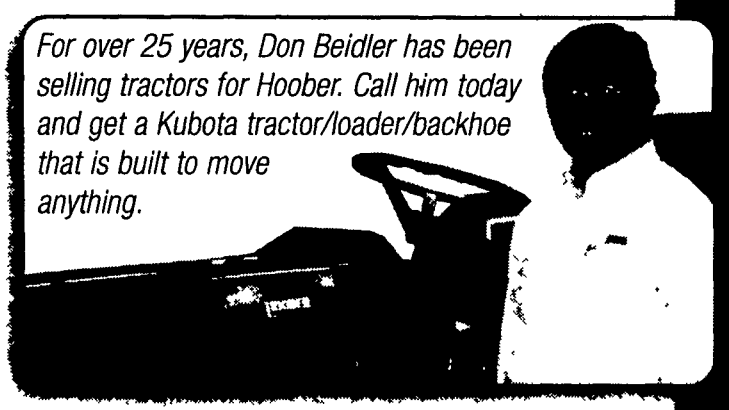
The Loader

The exclusive automatic hydraulic self-leveling loader automatically keeps the bucket at the same angle as the boom is raised or lowered. This minimizes spillage prior to dumping and makes the loader easier to operate.

The Backhoe

With a digging depth of 11.1 feet, the backhoe features a dedicated pump for the boom swing that makes for smooth, precise, and controlled operation. The backhoe can be removed and installed easily with its four-point mount, attach system.

For over 25 years, Don Beidler has been selling tractors for Hoober. Call him today and get a Kubota tractor/loader/backhoe that is built to move anything.



Transporting

Since the L48 weighs approximately 7760 lbs., It's easily transported by a 3/4 ton pick-up truck and a trailer rated 10,000 lbs., without the need for a CDL.

Other tractor/loader/backhoe models include the B21 (21 HP) and the L35 (35 HP)

Great Plains Ground Breaking Technology

New for 2001

Great Plains Precision Seeding System™

The revolutionary Precision Seeding System from Great Plains gives you the ability to singulate seed in the furrow while dramatically increasing seedbox capacity over traditional hopper-style planters Great Plains Precision Seeding Systems are available on the 15' and 30' models and each frame is designed specifically for its width. The Great Plains Precision Seeding System also opens the door to Ultra-Narrow Row configurations.

For almost 20 years Great Plains drills backed by Hoober's quality service and parts support have been the perfect combination for maximum productivity.

Great Plains 1005 No-Till Drill

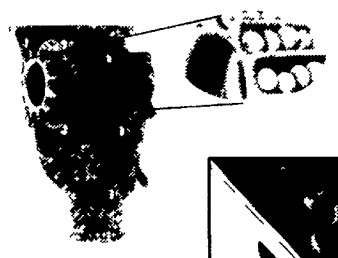
Great Plains

Speed-Change Gearbox

Makes seeding rate changes easier.



Fluted Seed Cups

Great Plains time-proven metering system will deliver the rate you choose evenly and gently.

T-Handle Depth Adjustment

Makes press wheel adjustments quickly and easily.

Turbo Coulters

Great Plains "Turbo" Coulters are a must in no-till conditions. They cut through the heaviest residue, clearing a path for the opener. The turbo coulter also puts "Tilth" into cold compacted soil helping to warm it and giving roots plenty of room to grow. Great Plains Exclusive turbo coulters penetrate better than conventional coulters.

On The Mark, Get Set, Grow!

The 6100 Series Rigid And Vertical Fold Planters.

Precision farming starts with precision seed placement. And that's exactly what you'll get with the White 6100 Series planters. Our pull-type planters feature an exclusive air-metering system that's designed to singulate every seed. Its low air pressure, edge-drop seed discs and short, 18" seed drop ensure precise seed placement for maximum germination.

Adaptable To Any Tillage Situation.
Our 4, 6, 8 and 12 row planters have the flexibility to meet most tillage practices both now and in the future. They're built rugged with a massive 7" x 7" frame and strong, welded-tongue design to handle the demands of heavy residue. Add a 6900 splitter attachment for interplant capability.

This season get the planter that places each seed where it'll grow the best — and perform the best. Stop by your AGCO® White Planter dealer today.

Lycoming Selects First Lamb and Wool Queen

MUNCY (Lycoming Co.) — Several Pennsylvanian counties annually select a lamb and wool queen to represent the industry, but this is the first year that Lycoming County conducted a coronation.

Shelly Vandine received the honor recently at the Lycoming Mall Center Court. She said, "I have been raising and showing sheep since I've been four years old. I feel it is important for people to know what goes on within the sheep industry."

The 18-year-old daughter of Wayne and Ruth Vandine, Shelly raises sheep on the family's 600-acre dairy farm. She shows registered Dorset breeding sheep in 4-H and open shows.

Shelly is accustomed to responsibility and leadership. After 13 years of participating in Pioneer Valley 4-H Club, Shelly serves as president, and was named Outstanding 4-H Girl in 1999. She also received the James E. Neholson Citizenship Award in 2000 and was 4-H ambassador in 1998.

In addition to raising and showing sheep, Shelly also has 4-H hog, steer, sewing, woodworking, and leathercraft projects.

A Muncy High School senior, Shelly participates in varsity soccer, is president of SADD, secretary of the booster club, member of Student Council and the National Honor Society, M-Club, yearbook, National Art Society, Key Club, and the mentor program. She also volunteers at the Muncy Valley Hospital.

Philadelphia Flower Show

varied, a hot topic this year for the area seemed to be dealing with the deer problem, said Janulewicz.

Special events included hands on demonstrations of displays of the latest in gardening, a lecture series every hour, and event presentations by chefs to offer decorating and preparation tips from garden to table.

As part of "The Gardener's Studio" Betsy Branson, who grows African violets to sell, showed the audience how to properly pot a violet. Branson began by coiling a synthetic wick through the soil, then poking the wick through the hole in the bottom of the pot. Branson demonstrated placing the coil in a water-filled deli container with a hole in the top. The violet then sits on the top of the container and will stay moist.

In addition the Zoological Society of Philadelphia demonstrated backyard habitats in their display. Another exhibit relayed information on soil identification, conditioning, and mulching.

Agriculture joined horticulture at the Burpee Seed Company display. The business, celebrating 125 years, paid tribute to W. Atlee Burpee, founder. An actor portraying Mr. Burpee answered questions and spoke about the history of the company. Burpee's Big Boy tomato, the first white marigold, and yellow sweet corn took center stage as famous hybrids developed by Burpee.

A Large-Scale Attraction

The 2000 flower show, which attracted 285,000 visitors over eight days, had an economic impact of $27 million on the city, according to show producer, the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

Covering 33 indoor acres, the show attracted 285,000 visitors last year. More than 125 vendors from the U.S., Holland, and U.K. come to sell their wares in the marketplace.

Revenue helps support Pennsylvania Horticultural Society programs, including the urban greening program, Philadelphia Green, which provides technical support and encouragement to residents groups who are working to add greenery to the city landscape.

Towering topiaries give an otherworldly feel to a fairy tale, Alice-In-Wonderland display.

Betsy Branson, who grows African violets to sell, presented her tips and tricks during the well-attended "Gardener's Studio."

Somerset To Conduct 2001 Dairy Day

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

BERLIN (Somerset Co.) — On Thursday, March 22, the 2001 Somerset Dairy Day will be conducted between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. at the community center on North Street in Berlin.

"It is open to our neighbors in surrounding counties," said Miguel Saviroff, Somerset County Cooperative Extension agent covering farm financial management and agriculture.

Saviroff indicated the 8:30 a.m. registration time will allow enough time for registrants to mingle and look over displays that will be set up by exhibitors, before Rep. Robert Bastian (R-69th) officially welcomes everyone.

The program's objective is to present information that has been researched on current issues that are relevant to local dairy farmers.

Improving performance and competitiveness will get a lot of emphasis. 'You have to become competitive in times of changing market conditions," said Saviroff.

The revolutionary design of barns, for instance, today provides dramatically improved illumination, ventilation, and combined good bedding for the dairy herd. These structures are built for cow comfort in any season. The return in production is cows are giving more milk for the farmer to send to market.

"The number of farms in Somerset County is being reduced," noted Saviroff, "but production is improving. In certain cases the farmer needs to delegate. Farmers need help in workers but they are not used to labor relationships and team building. Farmers are concerned for labor and management."

The dairy people who attend will also benefit from the financial and profitability information that will be presented during the program.

"Farmers have to be ready for financial analysis," Saviroff said.

Fermentation analysis, feeding fresh cows, reducing contamination — especially with kids around — and how to determine what is a risk area on the farm will be addressed, along with other very important issues.

First on the program schedule, David Pullen, DMI Consulting, will cover "2001 Feed Odyssey." Saviroff himself will discuss "Benchmarks and Bottlenecks."

Dorothy Bromley, Somerset extension educator, will discuss the topic, "Reducing the E. Coli Risk," just before the 15-minute morning break at 10:30 a.m.

"Top Ten Ways to Build a Profitable Dairy Business" will be covered by Brad Hilty from the Penn State Department of Dairy and Animal Science, followed by "Johne's Disease: Control and Prevention," by Dr. David Welch from the White Oak Veterinary Clinic.

Following the noon break for lunch is "Building a Team: Getting Everyone Moving Toward the Same Goals," by Richard Stup from the Penn State Department of Dairy and Animal Science.

Joanne Stoltzfus, Somerset extension agent covering 4-H and dairy, will have "Tips to Improve Herd Reproductive Performance" prior to the afternoon break.

Last, "Using Dairy Advisory Teams In Your Farm," will be covered by Dr. Lawrence Hutchinson, Penn State Department of Veterinary Science.

To register for the program and the lunch to be served by the Berlin Fire Company Ladies Auxiliary, call the Somerset County Cooperative Extension office at (814) 445-8911.

THE ADVANTAGES OF ROASTED CORN

* Earlier Harvest - Our roaster will dry corn down eight to ten points of moisture.

* Higher Digestibility - Research studies show that roasted corn is more digestible than high-moisture corn.

* Purer Feed - Our wet growing season has the potential of producing mold spores in standing corn that is harmful to livestock, swine and poultry. Our flame roaster can effectively remove mold spores.

* Drier Total Ration - With less fermented feed. Supplementing the hay and corn silage diet with dry corn aids better rumin health.

* Greater Profits - Dairy herds fed roasted corn advance two to eight lb. per cow in milk and improves herd health.

Announcing:

Crude Soy Oil Now Available

With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer soybean oil as an animal nutrition product. Processing the soybeans ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

Crude Soybean Oil

A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications. Crude soy oil is a natural alternative to animal fats and provides needed energy in various rations.

Uses of Crude Soy Oil Include:

- Use as a high energy feed ingredient in swine and poultry diets.
- Especially useful in sow lactation diets, pig starter and grow/finish diets.
- Used as an added energy source in broiler, turkey and layer feeds.
- Can be used for dust control purposes.
- Can be used as a lubricant for feeding systems.

Advantages of Crude Soy Oil:

- Use as a direct replacement for animal fat
- Vegetable based product.
- Holding tank does not need to be heated if temperature is above 30 degrees, which reduces storage and handling costs compared to animal fat.
- Bulk delivery, partial loads available direct to farm by Keystone Mills.
- Customer may pick up to save delivery costs.

Other Soy Products Available:

- Keystone offers Golden Pro 46 XP which is 46% protein - 6-7% oil, Golden Meal 40 which is 40% crude protein with 18% oil.

Keystone Mills Soybean Exchange Program

- We will take your soybeans in trade for Golden ProXP 46, Golden Meal 40.
- Contact Keystone Mills for details on our soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products.

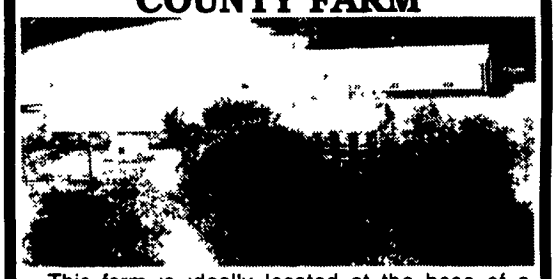
153 ACRE DAUPHIN COUNTY FARM



This farm is ideally located at the base of a mountain range in Northern Dauphin County, (Lykens Valley), near Millersburg The buildings are set several hundred yards off the main road, creating that perfect Currier & Ives setting everyone dreams about with the mountain as a back drop. The buildings feature a very well maintained brick center hall farm house with 4 large bedrooms and a large country kitchen. The out buildings consist of a 38x40 Bank Barn, 25x42 heated shop and 60x120 Morton pole building used for equipment storage. The majority of 100 tillable acres is gently rolling productive farm land with approximately 12 acres of pasture and 41 acres of woodland. This farm would be ideal for vegetable production with it's fertile crop land and abundant water supply for irrigation or it would make a perfect country estate, with it's beautiful setting and buildings.
